Feminist groups studied by FBI through 1973

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The FBI investigated women's liberation groups for at least four years up to 1973 and compiled a file on the politics and sexual preferences of activist women across the nation, the Los Angeles Times reported Sunday.

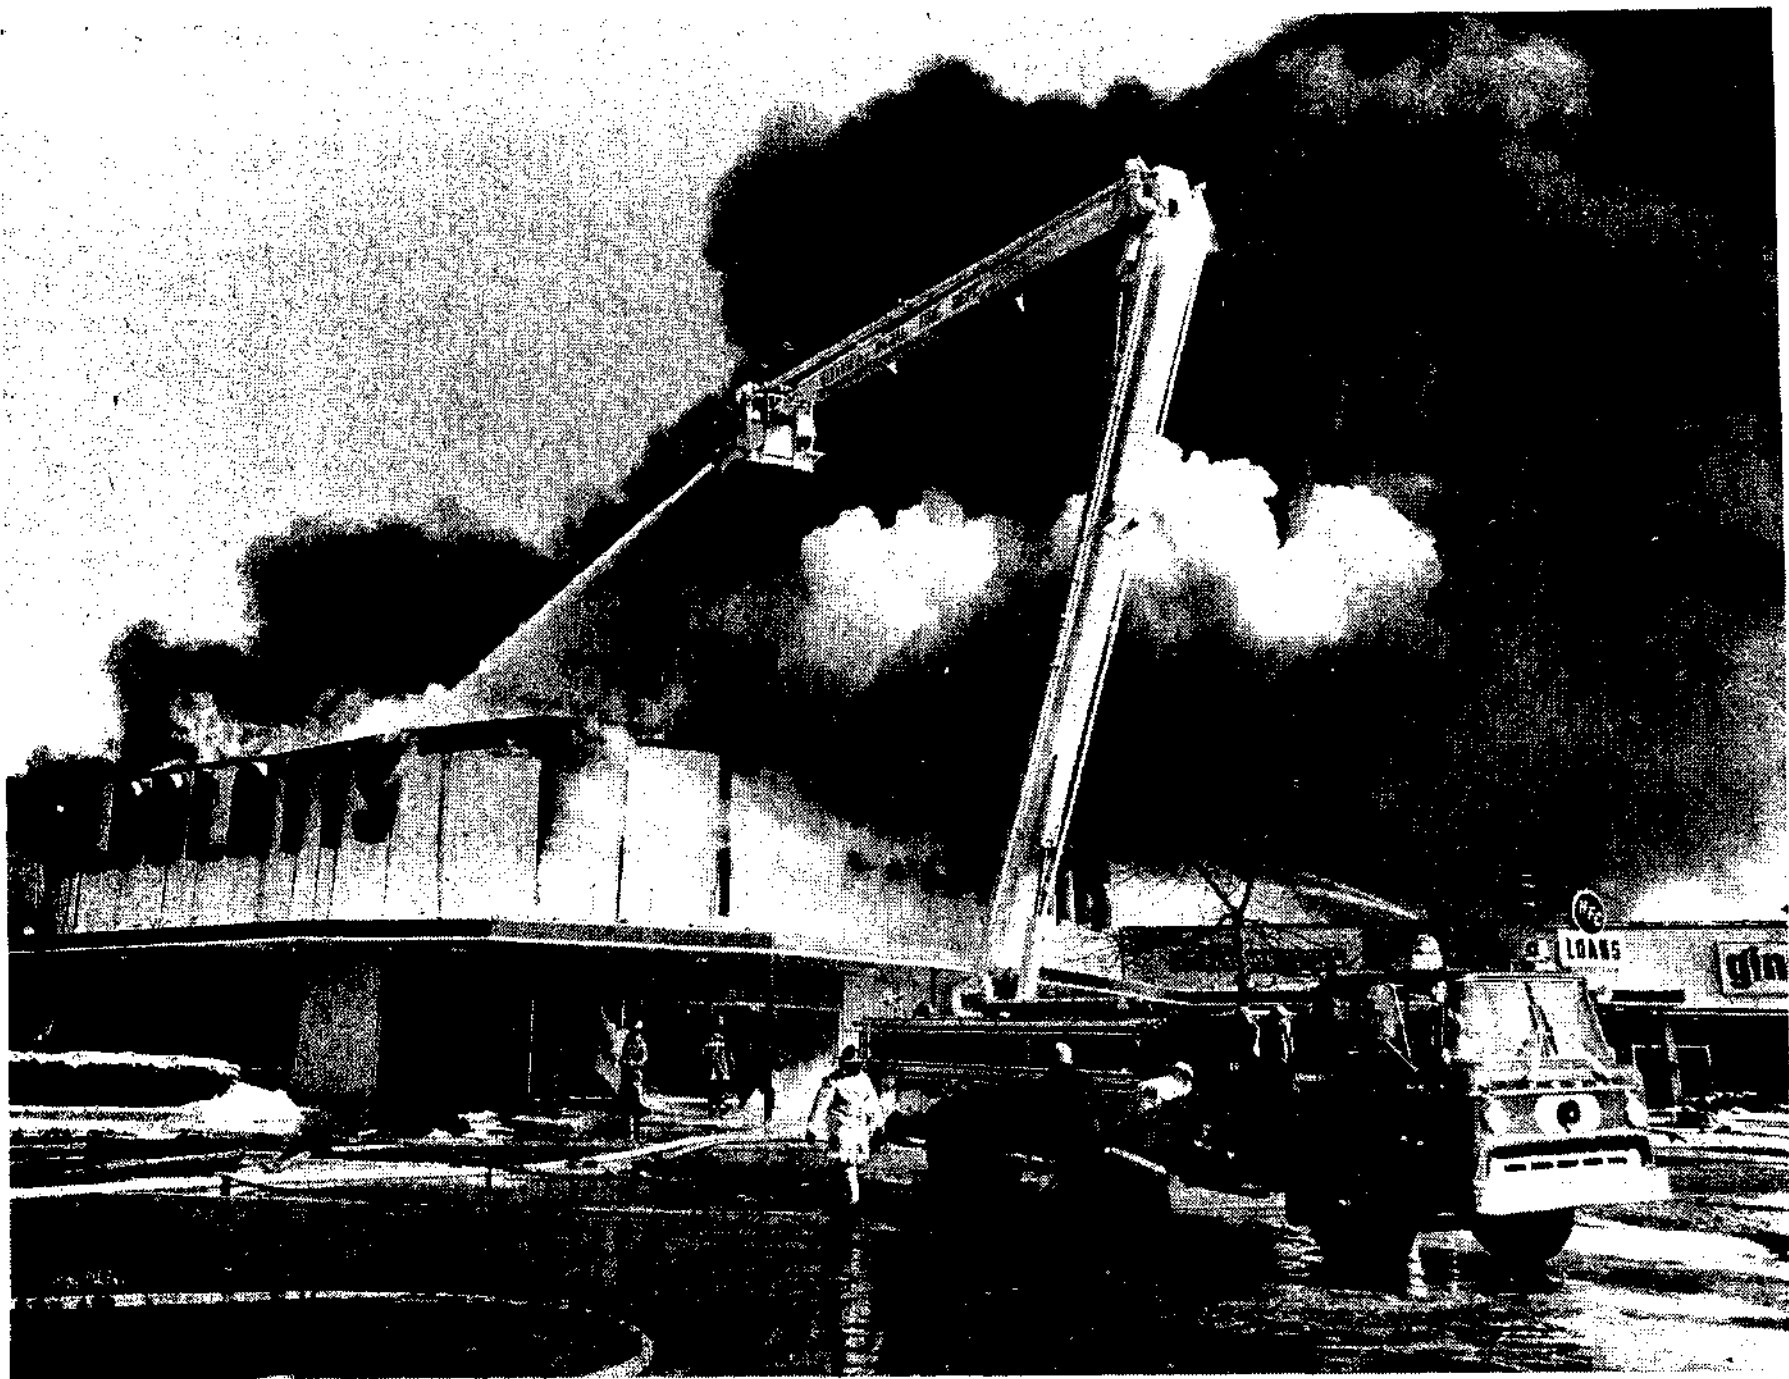

The story from the Times' Washington bureau said that a 1,377-page report made public through a request under the Freedom of Information Act was censored to eliminate the names of informants and of some, but not all, of the individuals investigated.

The late FBI director J. Edgar Hoover ordered the collection of the information over the objections of some field offices and the investigation con-

Firemen battle flames Sunday that engulf the Goldblatt's department store in Mount Prospect.

Fire guts Goldblatt's

A fire Sunday at the Mount Prospect Plaza Shopping Center destroyed a Goldblatt's department store and a bookstore.

Although official damage estimates were not available Sunday night, the loss figures are expected to be in the millions of dollars.

An adjacent ice cream parlor was heavily damaged. A jewelry store containing $100,000 in gold, diamonds and wristwatches escaped the flames but was damaged by smoke.

NO INJURIES WERE reported in the fire, which broke out at 10:50 a.m., 10 minutes before Goldblatt's was scheduled to open. Initial reports said an electrical malfunction in Goldblatt's furniture department triggered the blaze at the center, Rand and Central roads, Mount Prospect.

More than 100 firefighters from nine suburban departments battled the flames for several hours before bringing the fire under control about 2 p.m.

Within two hours, fire had razed the two-story Goldblatt's store. Firefighters directed high-pressure streams of water at all sides of the building and used snorkel units to combat the blaze from above to save the rest of the shopping center.

FIREFIGHTERS said the 16-year-old building had no sprinkler system or fire hoses because it was built before state laws requiring fire extinguishing systems were enacted.

Flames spread from Goldblatt's to the Book Corner next door, knocking down a wall and destroying the store. The 35 Flavors Ice Cream Parlor was severely damaged by heat, smoke and water.

Routine Sunday—not for Radosta

by DOUG RAY
Managing Editor

On a normal Sunday, Anthony Radosta would have been in the furniture department tagging merchandise.

This Sunday, he changed his routine. Instead of getting to work 15 minutes early, he stopped in DiCrescenzo's Italian market in the shopping center to pick up something to take home later for dinner.

So when Radosta walked around back of the Goldblatt's store and opened the door, the fire already had begun.

"I got right up to the door when two firefighters succeeded in keeping flames from spreading to Zoll Bros. Jewelry, adjacent to the Book Corner, and saved $100,000 in jewelry.

The fire reportedly broke out in the northwest corner of the Goldblatt's store. Flames ignited furniture, displays and clothing, and by the time firefighters arrived, the roof of the building had collapsed.

One of the first to report the fire was 12-year-old Alan Hendrickson, 280 N. Westgate Rd., Mount Prospect.

or three people ran out and said the place was on fire," Radosta looked up and saw smoke piercing through the seams in the roof.

"THE STOCK BOYS were the ones who came out the door. They yelled that my furniture store was on fire. I couldn't believe it at first because the smoke looked like steam from ice melting against the cold. Then it got heavier."

He walked around the building. In minutes flames shot through the roof. Inside a mass of yellow fire pushed toward the ceiling. Before long there was nothing left untouched by fire.

About 10 employees were inside when

Alan said he was walking by the north side of Goldblatt's with five friends when he saw fire through a picture window.

UNCONFIRMED reports stated seven store employees and the store manager were inside Goldblatt's when the fire broke out. All escaped without injury.

Jeff Hodes, 17, of Niles, said he was behind Harry's Shoe Center in the plaza when he "heard something like an explosion" and ran to the front, where he saw 30-foot flames shooting up from the store.

"The whole back portion (of the building) was just in flames — flames and smoke," he said. Smoke was visible 20 miles away.

Mount Prospect Fire Chief Larry Pairitz called for assistance, and eight other departments responded. Ice and freezing temperatures hampered firefighting efforts, and hand torches were used to thaw water hydrant valves at the plaza.

the furniture department went up in smoke.

Two of them, teen-age girls, stood outside the building watching the walls crumble to the ground.

"By the time I noticed it, the flames were about as tall as I am," said one of the girls. "We were in the office, and when I saw the fire we took off for the exits."

THE FIRE ALARM was sounded and the handful who still were inside made for two back doors. "Most of the people were just coming to work and hadn't gone inside yet," she said.

Radosta — who for four years worked in the area where the fire reportedly began — said there was nothing he knew of that could have started the fire. "Someone said the outlets exploded, but I really don't know if that's true," he said.

As soon as he realized what was happening, Radosta called his wife and then another Goldblatt's store at Belmont and Central, Chicago. Louis Goldblatt had been there a few minutes earlier as part of a tour of his stores.

After that, Radosta spent several hours watching the building go down.

"All I can do now is wait and see what happens. I've worked for the company for 16 years, you know. Maybe I'll get a transfer to another store."

Dist. 59 voters to decide fate of unit plan

by SHERYL JEDLINSKI and PAM BIGFORD

State Schools Supt. Joseph Cronin has decided to allow Elk Grove Township voters to determine if a unit school district will be formed in their area, setting the stage for a referendum this spring.

Opposing a recommendation by Cook County Schools Supt. Richard Martwick, Cronin Friday told the superintendents of Dist. 59 and High School Dist. 214 that he would let the unit district issue be decided in a referendum.

According to state law, Martwick must call for the referendum to be held between March 18 and June 6. If passed by a majority vote, the unit district would become effective July 1. Only residents in Dist. 59 will be eligible to vote on the issue.

THE UNIT district would combine Dist. 59 schools, Elk Grove High School, Elk Grove Village, and Forest View High School, Arlington Heights, under on school board and administration. Dist. 59 is one of seven elementary districts now in the Dist. 214 area.

Dist. 214 Supt. Edward Gilbert said Cronin did not go into detail Friday about his decision, but that "he indicated that after studying the transcripts from the public hearings, in his opinion he did not have sufficient basis in terms of a detriment to Dist. 214 not to permit a referendum to be held."

Gilbert and Dist. 59 Supt. Roger W. Bardwell, each said they expect to receive Cronin's confirmation of the decision today in the mail. Last month, after attending seven public hearings on the issue, Martwick recommended that Cronin reject the unit district proposal and not call for a referendum.

"I'm disappointed, I'll admit that," Gilbert said. He said the Dist. 214 board members and administrators will "brainstorm" about their next step at a board meeting at 8 p.m. today at the administration center, 799 W. Kensington Rd., Mount Prospect.

FORMATION OF the unit district would cost Dist. 214 nearly 27 per cent of its students and 42 per cent of its assessed valuation, requiring a readjustment of programs and transforming the district's cash surpluses into deficits, unit district opponents have said.

When asked if the board will take any action in the courts to challenge the state law allowing only residents of the proposed unit district to vote in a unit district referendum, Gilbert said, "It's a possibility."

Gilbert said that the board is not allowed to spend taxpayers' money to oppose any referendum, including one on a unit district.

OPPONENTS OF the unit district are already mobilizing their forces to get the facts out to the public before the issue comes to a vote.

"There are a lot of pieces of misinformation out and a lot of rumors and promises," said Dist. 214 board member Marilyn Quinn, who lives in Dist. 59.

"We hope the unit district can be defeated, but it will be an uphill fight," she said. "The unit district has the backing of the Elk Grove Village Assn. of Industry and Commerce, an organized group with a great deal of money to spend."

MRS. QUINN hopes to be able to enlist the support of local real estate agents in pushing to defeat the proposed unit district. The educational standards of a community affects real estate values even more than tax rates do, she said.

Unit district proponents will also be doing their share of mobilizing to get the word out to the voters. Most of the referendum planning will fall to the committee which filed the unit district petition, but the Dist. 59 Board of Education and Dist. 59 Supt. Bardwell also will have a large say in how the campaign for the proposal's passage is handled. Dist. 59 Board Pres. Judith Zanca said.

In the meantime, budget and staff planning for the 1977-78 school year has been thrown into chaos. The district will now have to work on two sets of plans: one with the two high schools and one without.

Salt supplies come for two villages

Although several Northwest suburbs have shortages of salt, Mount Prospect and Wheeling are replenishing their supplies. The Mount Prospect Public Works Dept. Friday received a 100-ton shipment from a Chicago firm. David Creamer, public works director, said the supply is good for about three more saltings. Despite the fresh shipment, however, Creamer said the village's supplier said "this could be the end." In Wheeling, the village will receive a special shipment today from Racine, Wis. The village's supplier, Diamond Salt Co., has "an excess of salt," Larry Oppenheimer, village public works director, said. "We'll be getting about 44 tons — enough for one more go-round. After two more days of snow we'll probably be out of everything," he said.

Police meeting on union issue

Palatine patrolmen, blocked in their efforts to have Teamsters Local 714 represent them in contract talks with the village, will meet Tuesday to map new strategy in obtaining union recognition. Thirty-three village patrolmen — 90 per cent of the force — have joined the local, but village officials refuse to recognize the union. A union official said he will suggest at the meeting nothing that could threaten the patrolmen's jobs, such as a strike or ticket slowdown.

Week to end near 40 degrees

Bye arctic blues, heat's on way

A heat wave is converging on Chicago, with temperatures near 40 by the end of the week, the National Weather Service in Chicago has predicted.

Temperatures will rise from a high in the upper teens today, to a high in the upper 20s Tuesday and a balmy high in the upper 30s by Thursday. Lows will dip to between 10 and 15 degrees tonight, but will hover in the 20s by Thursday night.

A spokesman for the weather service said the flow of air is shifting away from the arctic northwest toward the southwest, bringing a warming trend that should last through the week. A chance of snow, however, also is forecast for Thursday.

TEMPERATURES Thursday actually may rise above the average temperature for Feb. 10, which in the past has recorded a high of 34 and a low of 19, the spokesman said.

Warmer temperatures follow a frigid blast out of the north that passed through the Chicago area during the weekend, sending temperatures plunging to 5 below at Midway Airport early Sunday morning.

The cold wave continued across the nation Sunday, threatening a frost in northern Florida, and sending the mercury plunging from New York to the Southeast. Added pressure struck dwindling heating fuel supplies.

Snow added to the misery of New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Michigan residents. Nine counties in western and northern New York were assured of federal disaster aid. State officials estimated it may take nine days to restore order to the region.

tained until after his death in May 1972, the Times said.

A REPORT FROM the New York office said that at a Women's Liberation Movement meeting in 1970 a notice was posted recommending that women use actor Paul Newman's credit card number when dialing long distance.

The report did not say whether Newman authorized use of his credit card or whether the women regarded him as a male chauvinist target.

Another meeting decided not to let Bella Abzug, then a candidate for Congress in New York, use the center's mailing list as it would enable her to "promote her politics."

The Washington, Chicago and San Francisco offices of the FBI protested to Hoover that there were not sufficient national security grounds to conduct the investigation but Hoover overruled them.

"It is absolutely essential that we conduct sufficient investigation to clearly establish subversive ramifications of the WLM, and to determine the potential for violence presented by the various groups connected with this movement as well as any possible threat they may represent to the internal security of the United States," Hoover wrote.

SOME REPORTS made unflattering references to the appearance of militant women and contained suggestions the movement was dominated by lesbians.

A report from a Seattle informant said:

"The women, in general, appeared to be hippies, lesbians or from other far-out groups. Many of them were very colorfully dressed but the majority wore faded blue jeans. Most seemed to be making a real attempt to be unattractive."

The Times said the documents did not indicate what use the FBI made of the information.

Search for 2 protestors halted on Hawaiian island

HONOLULU (UPI) — The Navy has abandoned its search for two protestors on a remote Hawaiian island used for military bombing practice, but authorities said Sunday they will keep the area under surveillance.

The two men had been among a group of five who made an unauthorized landing on the restricted island a week ago.

A Navy spokesman said the search party of more than 40 marines, civilian police and naval ordnance disposal specialists was airlifted out by helicopter late Saturday from the tiny, uninhabited island off the coast of Maui.

The searchers had spent a week

looking for the protestors.

Three of the protestors were removed by Pearl Harbor civilian police several days after they landed, but the two others, identified as Walter Rittle Jr. and Richard Sawyer, remained at large.

Lt. Cmdr. Scotty Stone said further searches "will be made as the situation develops." The Coast Guard will conduct surveillance of the island and surrounding restricted waters, he said.

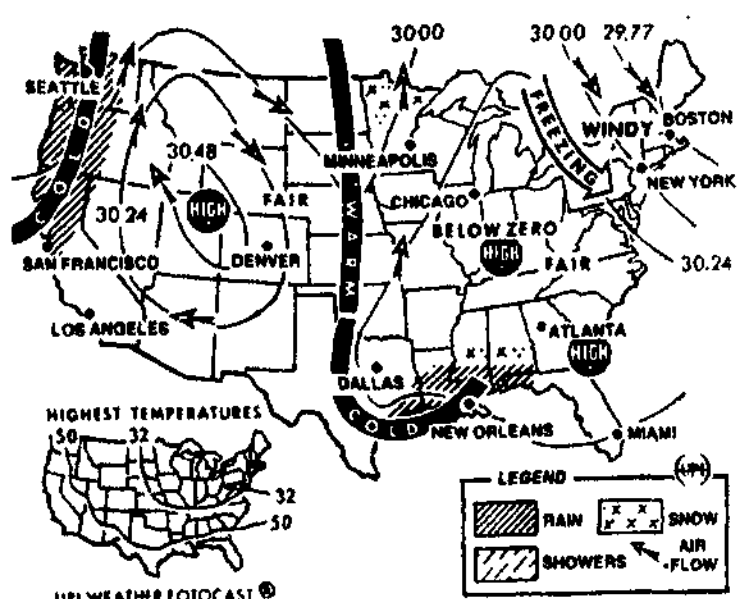

The Navy has maintained that U.S. military readiness would be diminished if training forces are halted from using Kahoolawe for bombardment and strafing practice.

Their concern has grown during the past few years because of growing demands by individuals and some top Hawaiian political leaders that the bombing be stopped and the island returned to the state for conservation purposes.

50 mull dilemma of more housing for low-income

The need for more affordable housing in the Northwest suburbs to accommodate more of the area's work force was the central theme Saturday of a housing conference sponsored by the Northwest Municipal Conference.

The conference, conducted at the Arlington Park Hilton Hotel, Arlington Heights, was attended by more than 50 municipal officials, business persons and regional planning officials.

Although a variety of housing issues and problems were discussed, much of the day was spent talking about the need for more housing for persons with low- and moderate-incomes who work in the Northwest suburbs but must live elsewhere because rents and home prices are beyond their reach.

THERE ARE 1,558 low- and moderate-income housing units either built or under construction in the Northwest suburbs, but the Regional Housing Coalition estimates there is a need for about 18,000 units.

"There is a need for more job-linked housing," said Jolyn Chiera, coordinator of the Minority Information Referral Center, Des Plaines. "Many minorities and non-minorities working in the Northwest suburbs can't find affordable housing in the area."

She said more affordable housing not only would benefit workers, but also area industry and business which is dependent on a stable work force.

"Until there is an increase in moderate income housing and assistance plans, businesses are not going to be able to keep employees," she said. "If they can't keep employees the businesses will be adversely affected and that will eventually affect the tax structure."

DANIEL LAUBER, of the Illinois Dept. of Local Government Affairs, said an exercise conducted at the morning session of the conference illustrated the need for more affordable housing in the area.

The exercise put participants in simulated positions attempting to purchase housing in the Northwest suburbs. Those taking part used actual real estate listings and salaries for jobs in the area.

"Generally we found that the lower a person's income the less likely he was to find the type of dwelling unit he wanted," he said. "In many cases persons with lower incomes were rejected for mortgages."

The exercise, he said, indicated that most persons working in the Northwest suburbs who can afford to live in the area, must settle for homes that are less than they need or desire. Many must settle for mobile homes, apartments and multiple family homes when they really desire single-family houses, he said.

LAUBER SAID persons or families with incomes of more than $20,000 per year were the only participants in the exercise who were able to obtain the type of housing they wanted.

"There are plenty of jobs out here but many without executive salaries," he said. "There are people in a lot of these jobs who would like to live out here but can't."

Lauber said that escalating home prices in the Northwest suburbs not only bar low- and moderate-income families from buying homes, but persons with higher income levels as well.

"It is difficult for your own sons and daughters to afford housing here," he said.

Although there seemed to be a consensus among those attending the conference that more affordable housing is needed, there were varying opinions on how it might be brought about.

SOME OFFICIALS said they favor building more affordable housing under federal programs, but others said they are leery of federal involvement for fear that local control will be lost.

"It's a problem, but local officials working together can solve it," said James J. McClure Jr., mayor of Oak Park and president of the Northwestern Illinois Planning Commission.

Jack Pahl, of the Leadership Council for Open Communities summed up the housing situation in the Northwest suburbs this way, "If you don't take the responsibility locally someone else will take it for you."

by DANN GIRE

Seeking to instill public confidence in Chicago's "L" train system, transportation officials and Chicago Acting Mayor Michael Bilandic Sunday night traveled with members of the press aboard a train simulating circumstances leading to Friday's rush-hour collision.

Eleven persons have been confirmed dead and 185 injured in the catastrophe at the Wabash Avenue and Lake Street intersection where a six-car train on the Ravenswood Line was rammed from behind by an eight-car Lake-Dan Ryan train.

The National Transportation Safety Board's final report on the accident, the worst elevated train collision in Chicago's history, will not be completed for at least six months.

KAY BAILEY, vice-chairman of the board, would not comment on the possibility that human error caused the crash that sent two train cars tumbling to the ground and left two more dangling from the tracks.

A preliminary investigation by the Chicago Transit Authority Saturday revealed that human error was responsible for the accident. CTA Chairman James McDonough said the hospitalized train motorman, Steven Martin, has said an automatic warning system was working but that he did not see the first train in time to stop.

McDonough said Sunday the simulated train ride "was to instill in the public the confidence" that the 80-year-old train system is safe to use.

The run, held shortly after 5 p.m., was conducted to let officials check the braking effectiveness of the "L" train and to see what visibility was like at the time of the collision.

Bilandic, Ms. Bailey, McDonough and representatives from other state and federal transportation agencies rode in the front car of the Lake-Dan Ryan train during the simulated trip.

AT THE COLLISION point, the Lake-Ryan train pulled to within a few feet of the first train while officials studied visibility and braking conditions.

Ms. Bailey said afterward that all train equipment checked out operational, and mechanical failure could not be blamed for the collision.

The CTA is self insured up to $2.5 million, Thomas Buck, CTA public affairs manager, said Sunday.

"We pay any claims up to $2.5 million. Anything from $2.5 to $20 million is insured by an underwriters group headed by Lloyd's of London," Buck said. He said 3.5 per cent of the CTA operational expenses are put aside into a special fund to take care of lawsuits.

In this year's budget, Buck said that $11.3 million has been set aside for this purpose. "So far, I don't know of any (lawsuits against the CTA stemming from Friday's collision)," he said.

Amy Carter baptized into Christian faith

Amy Carter was baptized in the Christian faith by immersion Sunday during a worship service at the First Baptist Church in Washington. President Carter sat during the baptism with eyes closed in prayer. As the 9-year-old was led into the waters of the baptism in the front of the Gothic sanctuary, Dr. Charles Trentham, the senior pastor, intoned: "Amy upon your confession of faith in Christ as Savior and Lord and in obedience to His command, I baptize you, my sister, in the name of the Father, the Son and the Holy Spirit." Gladys Silo Mbua, 16, from the Cameroons in West Africa, was baptized next. After her immersion, Dr. Trentham said: "We are buried with Him in baptism, we are raised together to walk on newness of life."

Maynard Ferguson says he's looking forward to belting out his latest hit release today in a 7:30 p.m. concert at Rolling Meadows High School, 2901 Central Rd.

Washington Park race rescheduling uncertain

From Herald news services

A fire that razed the Washington Park race track in south suburban Homewood late Saturday night was estimated to have caused more than $15 million damage. The blaze started in a washroom and "spread like lightning" through the wooden grandstands and clubhouse.

Track officials first feared a cleaning supervisor was trapped in the blaze, but he turned up Sunday afternoon after firemen had searched the smoldering ruins for several hours.

Tom Rivera, a spokesman for the Madison Square Garden Corp., that owns Washington and Arlington parks, said Sunday night it was too early to tell whether the blaze would affect racing dates at Arlington Park.

RIVERA SAID the Illinois Racing Board will have an emergency meeting at 1 p.m. Wednesday to determine how racing dates will be affected.

"Nothing like this has ever happened before in modern Illinois history, since racing was reinaugurated in 1924," Rivera said.

Rivera said park operators are considering an early opening of Sportsman Park in Cicero to continue racing dates allocated to Washington Park.

No injuries were reported in the blaze that broke out several hours after the Saturday thoroughbred card was completed, and none of the 1,200 horses housed in the barns was harmed.

THE TOWERING 200-foot flames reduced to heaps of debris extensive remodeling work on the 50-year-old structure and threatened to end the first winter thoroughbred meet in Illinois history.

Rivera said the fire started in a washroom on the second floor of the section.

"It spread like lightning," he said. "It was an amazing fire."

About 120 firemen from eight suburbs prevented burning debris from reaching the nearby Washington

Square shopping center and the track's stable area. They were unable to stop the fire from destroying the clubhouse, which housed a restaurant, track offices, betting windows, jockey quarters and press facilities. The steel superstructure that framed the grandstand collapsed into twisted girders.

The track was the site of the most famous match race in modern American thoroughbred history on Aug. 31, 1955, when Nashua, champion of the east, defeated Swaps, king of the west and Kentucky Derby winner.

"Washington Park was a fine old track, and although this was a catastrophe in the matter of property, we are extremely thankful and fortunate that no human beings were hurt and that no horses were injured or disturbed," said Joseph Joyce Jr., president of the Arlington-Washington Corp., a subsidiary of Madison Square Garden.

TRACK OFFICIALS first said that the remainder of the state's first winter thoroughbred meet would be cancelled, but officials later said there was a possibility the last month of the meet would be shifted to Arlington Park.

Spokesmen said no decision was made immediately on whether to rebuild the facilities. About $5 million was spent refurbishing the grandstand during the last several years, including $1 million on the clubhouse last year.

A track spokesman said installation of a sprinkler system had been scheduled.

William Masterson, executive secretary of the Illinois Racing Board, said $11,307,019 was bet at the track during January, generating $807,553 in state revenue. Attendance in the enclosed grandstand averaged about 5,000 in spite of bitter cold weather.

Flames roar through stores

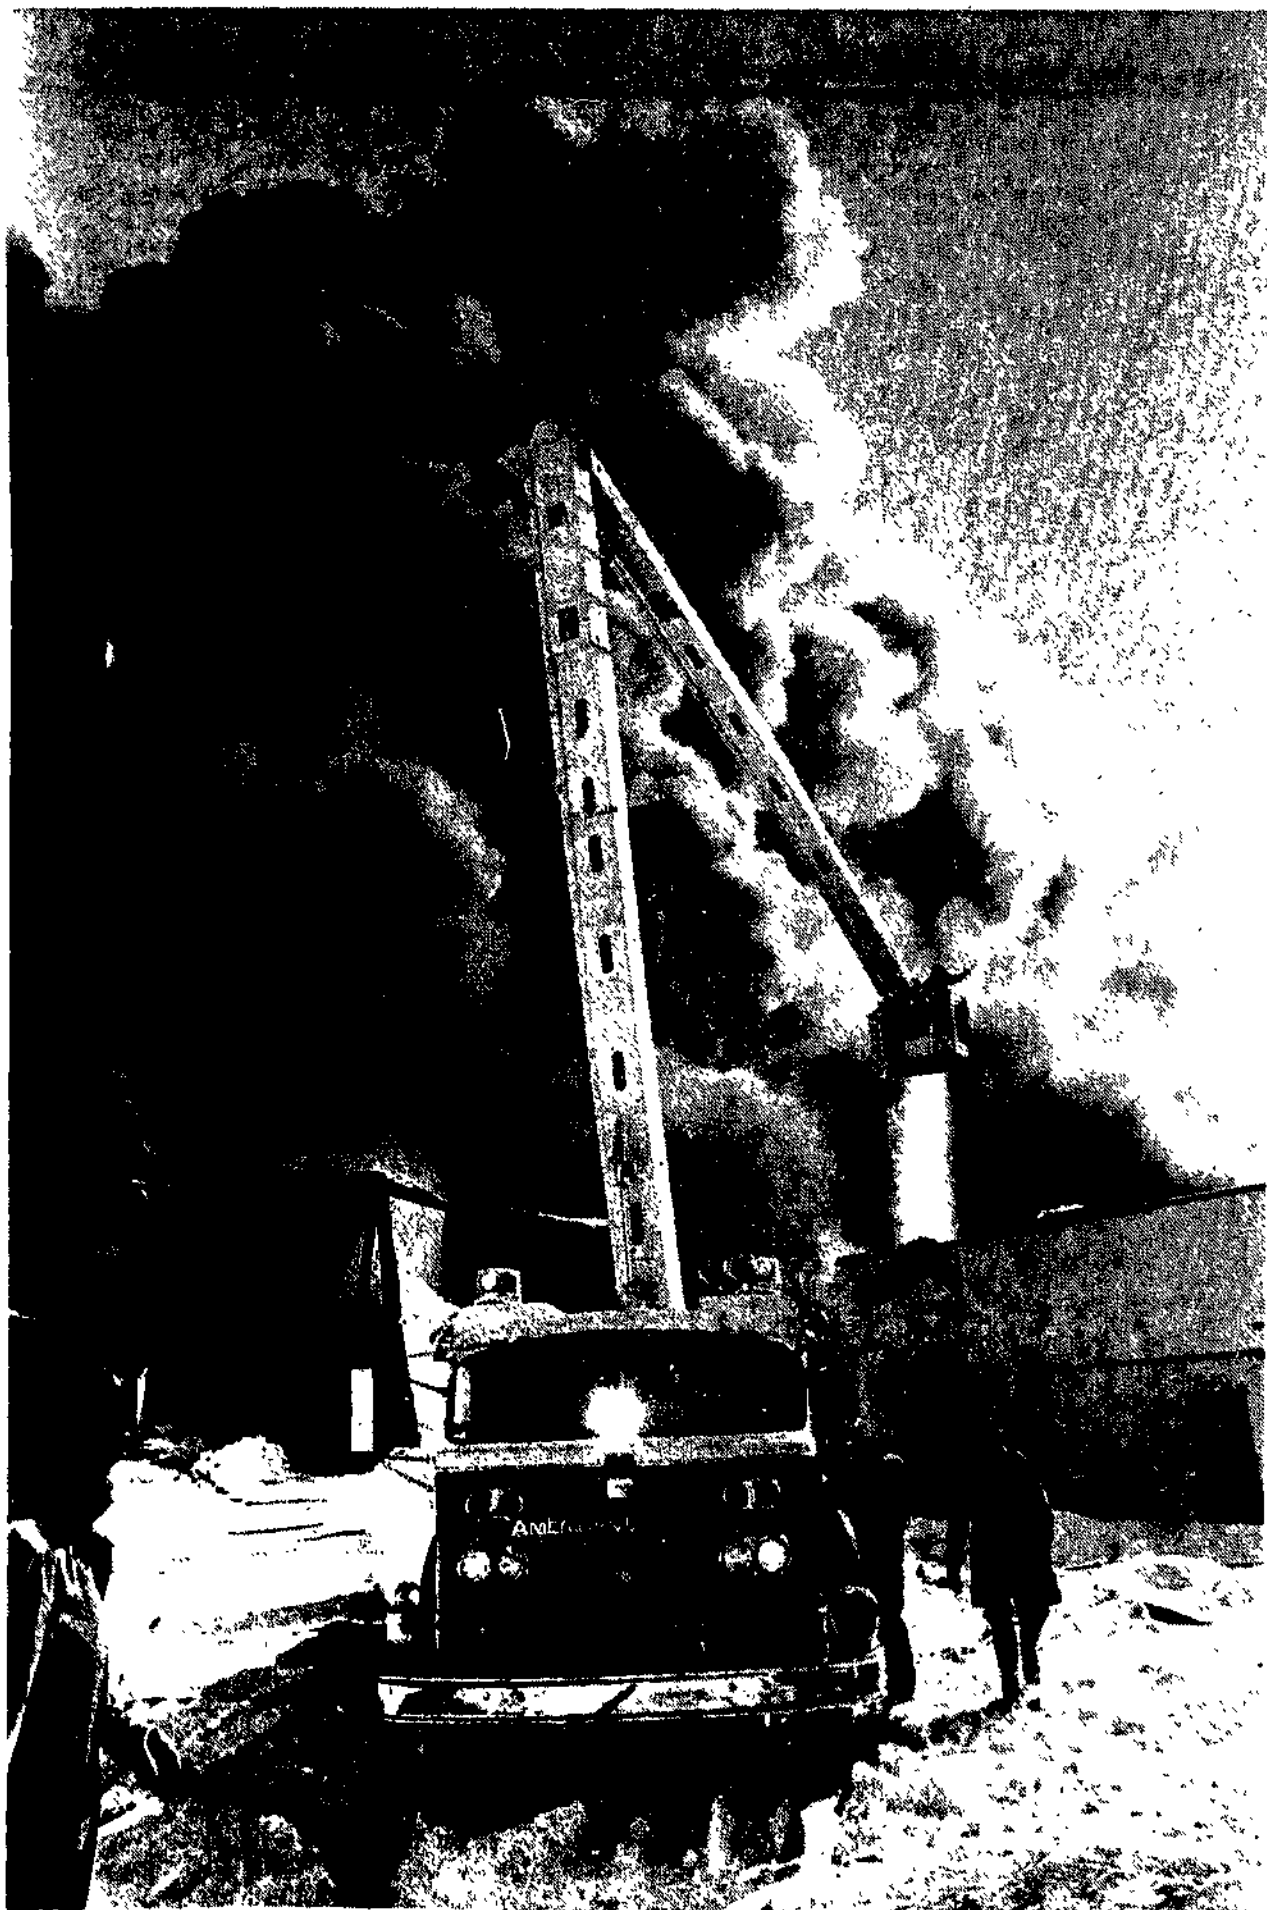

Flames roared in defiance of nine departments' firefighters' best efforts Sunday morning when fire gutted the Goldblatt's store in the Mount Prospect Plaza Shopping Center.

Fire spread quickly through the store. By the time firemen arrived shortly before 11 a.m. Sunday, the roof had collapsed and the walls were tottering.

Also gutted was the Corner Bookstore, next door to Goldblatt's store. The 35 Flavors Ice Cream Parlor was damaged by heat, smoke and water. The efforts of more than 100 firefighters saved the rest of the shopping center, at Rand and Central roads in Mount Prospect.

Only a skeleton of the Goldblatt's Department store stood after fire raged through the structure Sunday morning.

Smoke damages 25-year dream

Two months ago, Norman and Irving Zoll opened a jewelry store in the Mount Prospect Plaza Shopping Center. Sunday they were jamming their $100,000 worth of gold, rings and fine jewelry into the back seats of two Chevrolets.

"It was like a brand new store," Irving Zoll said. "They remodeled it and it was like new. We're heartsick right now, waiting to see what we're supposed to do."

"I just don't understand how something like this can happen," Irving said to his brother. "One thing we can be thankful for are the policemen and firemen. They helped pull the stuff out and allowed us to go back in and get the rest."

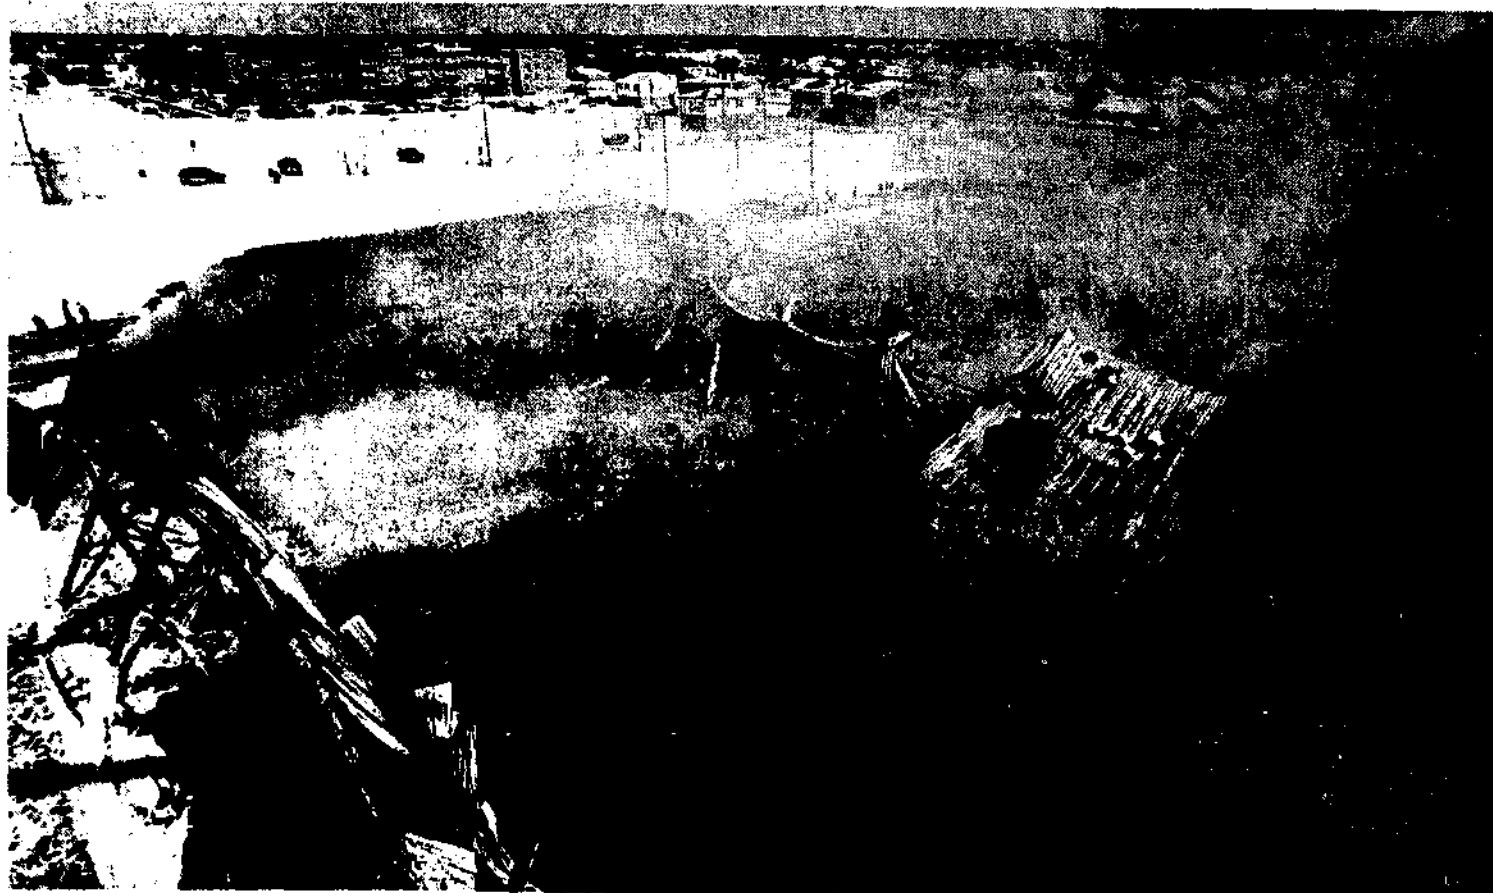

They managed to haul everything out and now were wondering what to do with those soggy cardboard boxes of jewels. "We can't go home right now. We'll stand here and watch," Irving Zoll said.

And there he stood, next to his brother, outside the damaged store they had dreamed about opening for 25 years. It is just a matter of time before they are back selling their jewelry again.

"It looks like the inside will have to be redone completely. But as soon as it is, we'll open the doors and start over again."

A few of the several thousand persons who gathered to watch firefighting efforts get a better look by standing atop a snow mound.

Goldblatt's was gutted, in the year's worst fire in the Northwest suburbs.

Nine fire forces respond under mutual aid system

Firefighters again found their mutual aid network invaluable Sunday, when nine suburban fire departments rushed equipment and men to the Goldblatt's Department Store fire in Mount Prospect.

The 6-year-old Mutual Aid Box Alarm System has repeatedly proven its worth to area firefighters, in drawing together help on emergencies ranging from apartment fires to drownings.

When Chief Larry Pairitz, confronted with a blaze at the Mount Prospect Plaza, decided he needed extra help, he notified a dispatcher in Arlington Heights three times, activating a three-alarm call for aid.

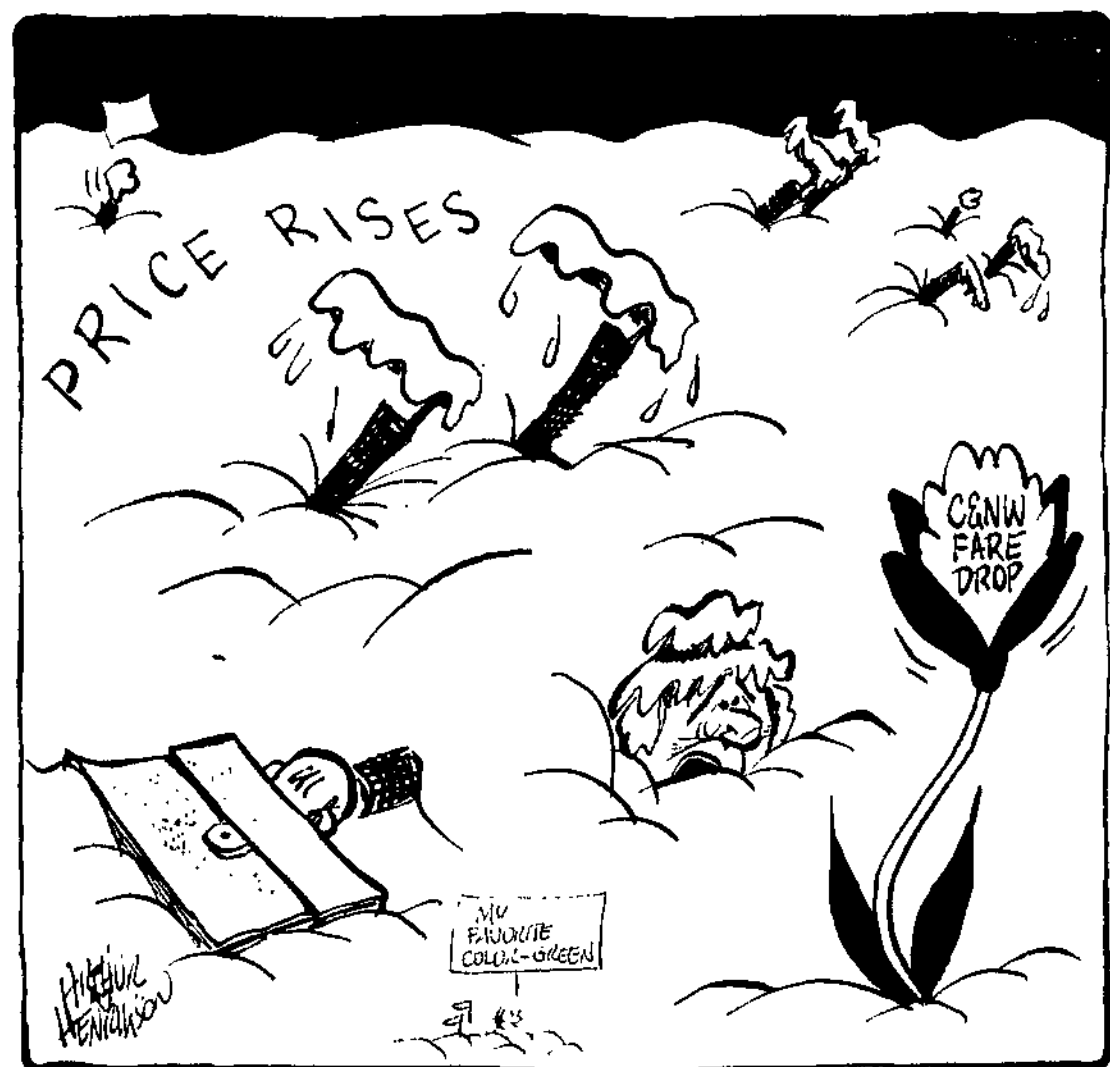

By noon, 16 pieces of firefighting equipment carrying more than 100 men from Arlington Heights, Elk Grove Village, Glenbrook, Buffalo Grove, Des Plaines, Prospect Heights, Wheeling, Palatine and Rolling Meadows had responded. On the scene were four fire chiefs, with Pairitz in command; eight pumpers; five ladder trucks; two snorkel trucks; and ambulances and squad cars.

The system has grown from nine Northwest suburban departments in 1971 to 37 departments in Cook, Lake and Kane counties, from Waukegan on the north to Elgin on the west and the DuPage County line on the south. The system contains four divisions — the original Northwest Cook County members being Division No. 1.

Fire departments have divided each of their communities into "box alarm areas." Each box is assigned an identifying number, and each department maintains and index to the boxes.

C&NW fare cut welcome

In these days of bad news and rising prices, it's startling to hear that the Chicago and North Western Railway fares from the Northwest suburbs to Chicago are going to drop an average of 9 per cent.

Once the amazement subsides, it is replaced by gratification. This announcement is an important indication the suburbs are finally going to begin reaping major benefits from the Regional Transportation Authority.

The RTA has announced the decrease in North Western fares as part of its over all program of equalizing mass transit fares in the six-county RTA region. The effective date for the lower fares has not been announced, but when they go into effect the cost of a one-way trip to Chicago from Mount Prospect will drop from $1.50 to $1.30 and from Palatine from $1.70 to $1.60.

For commuters who buy monthly tickets, the prices will also go down an average of $2.62. Those who buy weekly tickets will benefit most, with fares dropping an average of 10.2 per cent in that category.

The fare decrease has been made possible by the RTA and railroad finally reaching agreement on a purchase-of-service agreement. Negotiations on that agreement have been under way since the RTA was formed in 1974.

Local municipalities deserve credit for stalling fare hikes the railroad requested from the Illinois Commerce Commission during the negotiations. Arlington Heights officials were particularly active in testifying at hearings on rate increases and therefore saved commuters money while the negotiations were under way.

The North Western rate reduction, combined with the recent increases in bus service in the area, gives a taste of some of the benefits the suburbs can expect from the RTA as the agency finally begins to act on suburban needs.

The next step the RTA should take regarding the railroad involves improving train schedules and offering discounts for senior citizens, things that are in the agency's power under the purchase-of-service agreement.

RTA officials should be assured that if they do prove to be acting to benefit the suburbs, much of the suburban resistance to the agency will subside.

The North Western fare cut is a good first step toward offering the suburbs the needed proof.

Pikarsky's job remains RTA issue

While the Regional Transportation Authority won deserved praise with the announcement on Chicago and North Western Railway fares, there remains some unfinished business before the RTA board.

The unfinished business is RTA Board Chairman Milton Pikarsky.

After suburban members of the RTA board held up the agency's budget last spring, a court ordered the board to name a chief operating officer to take over much of Pikarsky's power.

The order came six months ago. On Monday, the RTA board has scheduled a meeting to discuss the new position.

During the budget crisis last spring, suburban members of the RTA board said they wanted to oust Pikarsky as board chairman because he was insensitive to suburban needs and was too tied to the Chicago Transit Authority to effectively run the agency.

The agreement to leave him in the job as board chairman but to name a chief operating officer was a compromise designed to remove Pikarsky from the day-to-day operations in hopes the agency would then be able to make progress in healing the city-suburban split.

Suburban members of the RTA board had the responsibility, once they accepted the compromise, to police it to make sure the court order was followed. They must now put pressure on the Chicago members to act without further delay to fulfill their part of the bargain.

The suburban members can, if the board delay lengthens, go to court to ask the compromise be enforced. If such action turns out to be necessary, it would only increase the city-suburban bitterness which already exists in the agency and in the RTA region.

Just as the action on the North Western fares is a sign of increased RTA activity in the suburbs, so action on fulfilling last summer's compromise on Pikarsky's job would be further indication of good faith toward the suburbs by Chicago board members.

Suburban board members should keep reminding their Chicago colleagues of that.

Who's scared of flying?

Jim Bishop

There is a long time love-dread relationship between me and planes. On the ground, I am a jet watcher. In the air, I'm a ground watcher. Nothing compares to the grace of silvery flight. And nothing can scare me to death as quickly.

Relax? Never. Only I and the captain listen to the whine of those engines. In turbulent air, I am the only one who notices how much the wing can flex without breaking off. At 30,000 feet, I can spot a solitary flash of lightning 80 miles away.

Quite often, I take a book aboard. Incredibly, I can read one paragraph for an hour without understanding a word. I may be the only passenger who accepts a cocktail with his fists clenched.

ANYTHING THAT weighs 350,000 pounds has no right in the sky. I know that. The Wright brothers knew it. But the designers don't. They keep making them bigger and bigger.

Someday, a stewardess will greet me saying, "Would you like to bowl awhile or try our Olympic swimming pool?" My well-mannered terror would be more bearable if the airlines would devise a means of getting me on the plane before I can change my mind.

The clerks write tickets as though they're adding the national deficit. They consult books, jot notations while jamming a phone between jaw and shoulder, make little jokes with other clerks as though they know something about this flight that I don't.

The food is uniformly execrable. My dog Charlie Chan would prefer to starve. The plastic dishes, the knives and forks are what the wardens give to lifers with a suicide impulse. Anyone who flies a lot can't be overweight.

NOR HAS ANYONE learned how to reunite the passenger with his luggage. My plane always docks at the far end of the airport. Like a herd of goats, we walk and walk, muttering to ourselves and flashing suspicious glances at passengers who walk fast.

Candidly, I do not need the spurious sex of the stewardesses. Some fly faster than the plane. A giggling behind and giggling bosom are dress at an altitude of six miles. A few act like girls being paid to look for a husband.

My father was in awe of planes most of his life. He wouldn't board one because he had a height phobia. Anything taller than a bungalow roof made his nose bleed. One day I said, "Why not try it once? The worst that can happen is that you will be killed."

HE MULLED it. "Dying," he said, "is something I have reserved as the last thing I want to do. But what the heck — you buy the tickets." I did. He stared out a window at the lime green world of Florida.

"What a beautiful, beautiful world it truly is," he murmured. From that day onward, he would fly anywhere at the slightest excuse. His friend, his hero, became Dick Merrill, the all-time greatest airline pilot.

Brother John was more cautious. "If they would only let you keep one foot on the ground," he mumbled. We got aboard a 727 with his wife Anna. The jet ran the runway. It lifted off. When it was six-feet high, Johnny grinned. "Tell the pilot this is high enough."

AND YET, in spite of gripes and gibes, the airlines of the U.S. are the best, the safest. Last year they flew the population of the nation and had but one fatal crash.

The equipment is superb. The pilots comprise a dedicated priesthood. The Federal Aviation Administration has thousands of men in dark rooms tracking thousands of planes on radar. In the last quarter century (which includes propeller-driven aircraft) scheduled airlines had 91 accidents.

This includes a high of 15 for United and TWA and a low of two for Delta. The 727s, the 1011s, the DC-10s almost fly themselves. In olden days, passengers were afraid the engines would catch fire. Today they fear the fire may go out.

PEOPLE WHO want to worry will find something to scare them. My wife has flown to Europe and back five times, flew around the world twice. She has spanned the continent so many times she nods to mountains she knows.

And yet — and yet she will not board a plane unless she has all of her Mother Cabrini medals and relics. I asked her if it didn't occur to her that Mother Cabrini might be too busy to listen. She might be working on some trivial matter, like war or peace in the Middle East.

"She's never too busy for me," Kelly says. "And if you're hinting that I'm scared, you're damned right I am."

Readers view two local traffic jams

Each and every day the traffic situation in Lynn-Plaza (corner of Dundee and Wheeling roads) remains the same — terrible. The funniest but sad problem is the unenforced "No left turn" at the Dundee road exit. Many times a week people attempt and succeed in making the illegal turn. This type of turn periodically causes traffic backup and also increases the possibilities of an accident. If the Wheeling Police are not going to enforce the no left turn law then remove the sign.

This same exit should also be better marked to warn people that they are exiting from the wrong driveway. Periodically people will use the east driveway to leave the shopping center, again increasing the possibilities of an accident.

Monday through Friday's evening rush hours produce the worst situation in the shopping center. Many times each evening when the Dundee road light turns red people use the parking lot as a shortcut. This is another law that should be enforced by the Wheeling Police. (Using private property to avoid a traffic signal). It is quite obvious that people are using this exit for that purpose. They speed through the lot and someday an unfortunate person is going to be injured or killed. (This situation is also apparent in the Dunhurst Shopping Center during the morning rush hour).

I realize the police can not be everywhere but I also realize that people abuse these laws. Examples should be made of these people and the laws enforced.

As a resident along Hassell Rd. in Hoffman Estates I am one of many who must spend each early morning attempting through whatever means possible to get onto Barrington Road from Hassell Road.

Given any morning one will spot at least one Hoffman Estates policeman giving tickets to residents attempting to go through shopping center parking lots or turning around on Hassell to go another direction. In 5 years I have never seen a policeman direct traffic at this busy intersection.

Please — if our police would spend one-fourth as much time helping us get out of Hassell Road in an orderly fashion and alive as they spend ticketing people trying to do it on their own, we all would have a much better day.

'Rebate no help'

President Carter's tax rebate proposal sounds nice to a family of four who would receive $200 to stimulate the economy. But if he also deregulates price controls on interstate natural gas, even for only six months, the rebate should just about cover the increased costs that the consumer will have to absorb.

The gas companies would get their economy stimulated, while the "little guy" would again get it in the ear!

Poor little match girl—a new version

by DICK WEST
WASHINGTON (UPI) — "It was terribly cold, it snowed and was already almost dark, and evening came on, the last evening of the year. In the cold and gloom, a poor little girl, bareheaded and barefoot, was walking through the streets."

Thus begins one of the most heart-wrenching short stories in all literature — Hans Christian Andersen's "The Little Match-Girl."

Heaven forbid the rigorous winter weather now causing hardships in many parts of the United States should produce privations like that.

The severe cold wave has, however, already given us the match-girl's modern counterpart. In the updated version, the opening lines possibly would read as follows:

"IT WAS TERRIBLY cold; it snowed and was already almost dark, and evening came on. In the cold and gloom, a heavily rouged girl in platform shoes, miniskirt and pink bouffant hairdo was walking the street."

Yes, friends, pity the poor street-walker on a night like this!

From all accounts, hookers are among the chief victims of the current inclemency. In Detroit, for example, according to the Wall Street Journal, "large numbers of the city's prostitutes have been forced off the streets by the fierce weather."

LET US RETURN to the Andersen classic: "No one had bought anything of her all day."

One can easily imagine a streetwalker in a similar plight.

Male pedestrians slipping and sliding on the icy sidewalks aren't much interested in amorous propositions.

And in the street, cars are skidding and banging into each other, causing horrendous traffic tieups. Under those conditions, no cruising motorist is likely to pull up to the curb to accost a passing floozy.

TO CONTINUE with Andersen: "Snowflakes covered her long fair hair, which fell in pretty curls over her neck."

The same thing could happen to a streetwalker.

"There goes my beehive," she wails as the snow neutralizes the holding power of her hair spray, causing her coiffure to collapse around her neck.

Andersen wrote of his wail that "she did not dare to go home . . . they had nothing over them but a roof through which the wind whistled."

ONE LIKEWISE can picture a streetwalker reluctant to go home. For the thermostat in her apartment is set so low even her goosebumps get goosebumps.

Andersen gave his story a poignant tragic ending. In the corner, leaning against the wall, sat the poor girl with red cheeks and smiling mouth, frozen to death."

I like to think that for streetwalkers, the ending will turn out better — perhaps with an O. Henry twist.

"In the corner, leaning against the wall, the girl with red cheeks and smiling mouth met a congressman, who offered her a job as a typist."

Learning first-aid skills essential to safety at industrial plants: medic INDUSTRIAL FIRST AID training advocate Dr. Thomas Cronin, right, checks Fidel Berrera's injured thumb at O'Hare Industrial Clinic.

by LEA TONKIN

Competent first aid for injured workers is an essential ingredient in the creation of a safe work place, according to Dr. Thomas Cronin, medical director at the O'Hare Industrial Clinic, Elk Grove Village.

Noting that more than 300 industrial workers and supervisors plan to participate in a nonprofit first-aid seminar Wednesday sponsored by the clinic, Dr. Cronin said employee safety is increasingly important to local industry. The pressures of Occupational Safety and Health Act standards as well as concern for employee welfare account for this trend, he said.

"I think it's a genuine concern. A company can show it cares about its employees, and it will have more productive employees," Dr. Cronin said of industrial first-aid programs.

"WE'RE AIMING this seminar at the industrial worker, so they can stabilize the situation before the patient comes to a hospital or the paramedics reach them," Dr. Cronin said. Participants in the first-aid seminar at the Flick Reedy Corp. auditorium in Bensenville will learn basics in cardiac and pulmonary emergency treatment, shock recognition and management, handling fractures and toxic emergencies.

"As in the case of cardiopulmonary resuscitation, it's very dramatic," Dr. Cronin said. Some workers might be reluctant to learn the resuscitation techniques, but they quickly overcome their fears in an emergency situation, he said.

Competent treatment of burns and fractures resulting from on-the-job situations is important, Dr. Cronin continued. "For example, people have put everything from chicken fat to butter on burns. This has to be removed before a doctor can analyze the situation. We tell them to put on a clean dressing."

Employees working in a punch press area might be more vulnerable to injuries than office workers, but the benefits of first-aid training are important to any manager, the medical director said. Dr. Cronin noted that the clinic staff recently treated a woman who had broken her ankle while working in a store's credit department.

FIRST AID IS only one aspect of an employer's health and safety concern. "The whole field of industrial medicine has undergone a metamorphosis as a result of OSHA," Dr. Cronin said.

Accident prevention programs, pre-employment physicals, screening out health hazards and other efforts mean higher costs to industry, Dr. Cronin said. Employers are realizing the benefits of greater productivity, less litigation and a decrease in lost wages as a result of industrial safety programs.

O'Hare Industrial Clinic will sponsor additional first-aid seminars to serve Northwest suburban industries. Reservations for the seminar are closed.

The keynote speaker at the seminar will be Dr. Stanley Zydlo, director of emergency services at Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights. Dr. Zydlo helped for ambulance personnel in the Northwest suburbs. Other speakers will be Dr. Cronin; Dr. Otto Bouc, an orthopedic surgeon; and Dr. Constantine Soter, director of radiology and nuclear medicine at Northwest Community Hospital.

BIG BUSINESS

Management search means upswing

BURBANK, Calif. (UPI) — A West Coast management level recruiter is sure there soon will be an upward swing in the economy. He says corporations are looking for executives who can provide orderly growth in profit situations.

Joseph Fowler is a specialist in recruiting top and middle management executives, the type he calls "overachievers."

He looks for the man or woman who can return to management more than his employer asks for.

HIS OPTIMISM about 1977 stems from his knowledge of demands for such recruiting activities in the early part of this year.

"Corporations see opportunities to expand and want to get top quality personnel — the overachievers — into key positions for orderly and profitable growth," he said.

"There is no question in our minds that our order book today reflects emergent prosperity," he said. A good number of assignments for top level executives require search activity to begin this month.

"Barring some totally unanticipated contingency," Fowler said, "We'll see an economic upsurge beginning in March and taking significant effect by May."

HEAD OF HIS own firm, Fowler has been in the business of finding top-level management for 23 years. His billings have exceeded $1 million annually for the past half dozen years.

Executive recruitment firms around the nation command about $100 million a year in fees. They are called on to help fill positions in four of every five major companies across the country.

"I personally believe executive search assignments constitute an earlier and more reliable economic indicator of what's going to happen in the future than retail sales figures, shifts in unemployment data, changes of floating money supply or freight car loadings," he said.

Spare tire issue brings complaints

The spare tire shortage caused by last year's lengthy rubber workers strike is triggering many consumer complaints and at least one request for a government investigation. Some car buyers say they've been waiting more than four months for the spare tires they paid for when they purchased new cars. Others apparently bought cars unaware the spare wasn't there. Auto makers say they are catching up with the situation, however, and hope dealers will have spares in all cars owed them in a matter of weeks.

A Ford spokesman said its replacement program is 70 per cent complete and should be almost finished by Feb. 28. General Motors said 90 per cent of the 1.5 million spares it owed car buyers have been made and shipped, although dealers are still contacting owners and the installation process is continuing.

The Center for Auto Safety, a public interest group, wants the Federal Trade Commission to investigate whether "any misrepresentation or unfair trade practice exists. If so, the FTC should order affected consumers to be reimbursed for the cost of the tires, the interest on this capital and the discounted value of the other tires due to the inability of the owner to follow the suggested rotation of tire intervals without use of the spare tire," the group said.

Spy satellite launched

A spy-in-the-sky satellite designed to monitor launchings in Russia and China roared into the night sky above the Kennedy Space Center in Cape Canaveral early Sunday in a secret launch. The satellite is also said to carry new equipment aimed at thwarting Russian efforts to develop a hunter satellite that could wipe out other countries' orbiters. The Air Force issued a brief statement saying only that a "classified launch employing a Titan IIIC" had been successful.

Turner mulled for CIA chief

A White House aide confirmed Sunday that Adm. Stansfield Turner, commander of NATO forces in southern Europe, is one of several candidates for nomination as CIA director. Presidential aide Hamilton Jordan said Turner is "under serious consideration" for the Central Intelligence Agency post, along with several other candidates he would not name. Carter still must choose a CIA director since his previous nomination of former Kennedy adviser Theodore Sorensen ran into Senate opposition and was withdrawn. Turner, 53, was a classmate of President Carter at the Naval Academy.

Quebec premier's car kills man

A car driven by Quebec Premier Rene Levesque ran over a man in the early morning hours Sunday and the man later was declared dead on arrival at a Montreal hospital. Police said the unidentified man was hit while lying in a city street and an autopsy would have to be held, probably on Monday, to determine whether he was already dead when struck by the car in which Levesque and his secretary were returning home.

The premier, who was not charged with any offense, said in a statement to police he hit the man after swerving to avoid a person who was attempting to warn him off. Montreal police Lt. Larry Levy said the man who tried to signal Levesque away confirmed the premier's version of the accident.

Ask tighter Rhodesia sanctions

President Julius Nyerere appealed to the United States Sunday to tighten economic sanctions against Rhodesia to topple Prime Minister Ian Smith. Nyerere told a news conference he had asked newly appointed U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young for American help "to get this stumbling block (Smith) out of the way." Young, on a fact-finding tour of black Africa, held a second round of talks with Nyerere Sunday at the president's beach front residence. Asked what Washington could do to help topple Smith from power in Salisbury, Nyerere told a news conference: "They can tighten sanctions against Rhodesia." He called for repeal of the Byrd amendment under which the United States imports Rhodesian chrome in defiance of U.N. sanctions.

Soviet chief views arms race

A senior Soviet official has warned that failure of the United States and Soviet Union to conclude a new Strategic Arms Limitation agreement soon could accelerate the arms race and see the introduction of new weapons of "mass destruction." At the same time, George Arbatov, director of the Institute of the U.S.A. and Canada, charged it is the United States and not the Soviet Union that has always tried to achieve military superiority over the other. But, said Arbatov, in an article published in the Communist party daily newspaper Pravda Saturday, the attempts were "invariably frustrated" by the Russians and at present there is "approximate parity" of forces between the two sides.

AMA urging sponsors to cut TV violence

by United Press International
The American Medical Assn. has asked 10 major corporations to stop sponsoring violent television shows, AMA president Dr. Richard Palmer Sunday said.

Palmer said Sears Roebuck and Co. agreed to stop buying ads for the most violent primetime shows, but an AMA spokesman said the company's decision was made before the AMA approached the subject.

The AMA chief said the medical organization also urged the television networks to review policies that support violent programming.

"TV HAS BEEN quick to raise questions of social responsibility with industries which pollute the air," Palmer said. "In my opinion, television through its access to air waves may be creating a more serious problem of air pollution."

The AMA chief said, "If the programming a child is exposed to consists largely of violent content, then his perceptions of the real world may be significantly distorted."

Palmer said he urged each of the 10 advertisers "to recognize the medical aspects of your advertising program and consider its impact on society."

"SINCE CONTACTING Sears Roebuck and Co.," he said, "I have learned that Sears has reviewed its corporate policy and will not knowingly place commercials in any programming that contains excessive violence or sanctions antisocial behavior."

The AMA also made the request to these corporations: General Motors, American Home Products, American Motors Corp., Eastman Kodak Co., Joseph Schlitz Brewing Co., Procter and Gamble Co., General Foods Corp., Burger King Corp., and PepsiCo, Inc.

Palmer also thanked companies he said support programs with little violence, including: Peter Paul, Inc.; Hallmark Cards, Inc.; Texaco, Inc.; Whirlpool Corp.; Prudential Insurance Co. of America; Squibb Corp.; Kusan Corp.; Green Giant Co.; Keebler Co. and Carnation Co.

Scene: Office of the Sales Manager of the major mattress manufacturing company.

Sales Manager: What is this terrific new idea of yours?
Product Engineer: It's a new mattress with a board in the middle. It makes the mattress harder than - I mean it makes it very hard.

Sales Manager: Sounds good. We could call it the "Board-O-Pedic." The public wants hard mattresses today. We've been spending enough money telling them this for the last ten years.

Product Engineer: We do use a little foam padding, but with the board in the middle, you hardly feel the padding.

Sales Manager: Have you tried it yourself?
Product Engineer: Sure! I used it for three nights and it almost killed me. I hardly slept a wink. But it's harder than any of our competitors are making so it should sell.

Sales Manager: Maybe we should call it the "Upholstered Board?"
Product Manager: I don't know - there's a little company called Schaumburg Mattress Factory that makes fun of these hard mattresses. They tell their customers they shouldn't sleep on these "Upholstered Boards."

Sales Manager: How do you know so much about the Schaumburg Mattress Factory?
Product Engineer: That's where I bought my mattress and man, is it comfortable!!

Exit: Product Engineer.

TRANSPORTATION SEC. Brock Adams said Sunday he'll try to "rescue" the 55 mile-an-hour speed limit and will consider the need for requiring auto makers to put air bags in new cars. Adams said the speed limit is important from a fuel conservation viewpoint and for safety.

Spare tire issue brings complaints

The spare tire shortage caused by last year's lengthy rubber workers strike is triggering many consumer complaints and at least one request for a government investigation. Some car buyers say they've been waiting more than four months for the spare tires they paid for when they purchased new cars. Others apparently bought cars unaware the spare wasn't there. Auto makers say they are catching up with the situation, however, and hope dealers will have spares in all cars owed them in a matter of weeks.

A Ford spokesman said its replacement program is 79 per cent complete and should be almost finished by Feb. 28. General Motors said 90 per cent of the 1.5 million spares it owed car buyers have been made and shipped, although dealers are still contacting owners and the installation process is continuing.

The Center for Auto Safety, a public interest group, wants the Federal Trade Commission to investigate whether "any misrepresentation or unfair trade practice exists. 'If so, the FTC should order affected consumers to be reimbursed for the cost of the tires, the interest on this capital and the discounted value of the other tires due to the inability of the owner to follow the suggested rotation of tire intervals without use of the spare tire,' the group said.

Spy satellite launched

A spy-in-the-sky satellite designed to monitor launchings in Russia and China roared into the night sky above the Kennedy Space Center in Cape Canaveral early Sunday in a secret launch. The satellite is also said to carry new equipment aimed at thwarting Russian efforts to develop a hunter satellite that could wipe out other countries' orbiters. The Air Force issued a brief statement saying only that a "classified launch employing a Titan IIIC" had been successful.

Turner mulled for CIA chief

A White House aide confirmed Sunday that Adm. Stansfield Turner, commander of NATO forces in southern Europe, is one of several candidates for nomination as CIA director. Presidential aide Hamilton Jordan said Turner is "under serious consideration" for the Central Intelligence Agency post, along with several other candidates he would not name. Carter still must choose a CIA director since his previous nomination of former Kennedy adviser Theodore Sorensen ran into Senate opposition and was withdrawn. Turner, 53, was a classmate of President Carter at the Naval Academy.

Quebec premier's car kills man

A car driven by Quebec Premier Rene Levesque ran over a man in the early morning hours Sunday and the man later was declared dead on arrival at a Montreal hospital. Police said the unidentified man was hit while lying in a city street and an autopsy would have to be held, probably on Monday, to determine whether he was already dead when struck by the car in which Levesque and his secretary were returning home.

The premier, who was not charged with any offense, said in a statement to police he hit the man after swerving to avoid a person who was attempting to warn him off. Montreal police Lt. Larry Levy said the man who tried to signal Levesque away confirmed the premier's version of the accident.

Ask tighter Rhodesia sanctions

President Julius Nyerere appealed to the United States Sunday to tighten economic sanctions against Rhodesia to topple Prime Minister Ian Smith. Nyerere told a news conference he had asked newly appointed U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young for American help "to get this stumbling block (Smith) out of the way." Young, on a fact-finding tour of black Africa, held a second round of talks with Nyerere Sunday at the president's beach front residence. Asked what Washington could do to help topple Smith from power in Salisbury, Nyerere told a news conference: "They can tighten sanctions against Rhodesia." He called for repeal of the Byrd amendment under which the United States imports Rhodesian chrome in defiance of U.N. sanctions.

Soviet chief views arms race

A senior Soviet official has warned that failure of the United States and Soviet Union to conclude a new Strategic Arms Limitation agreement soon could accelerate the arms race and see the introduction of new weapons of "mass destruction." At the same time, George Arbatov, director of the Institute of the U.S.A. and Canada, charged it is the United States and not the Soviet Union that has always tried to achieve military superiority over the other. But, said Arbatov, in an article published in the Communist party daily newspaper Pravda Saturday, the attempts were "invariably frustrated" by the Russians and at present there is "approximate parity" of forces between the two sides.

AMA urging sponsors to cut TV violence

by United Press International
The American Medical Assn. has asked 10 major corporations to stop sponsoring violent television shows, AMA president Dr. Richard Palmer Sunday said.

Palmer said Sears Roebuck and Co. agreed to stop buying ads for the most violent primetime shows, but an AMA spokesman said the company's decision was made before the AMA approached the subject.

The AMA chief said the medical organization also urged the television networks to review policies that support violent programming.

"TV HAS BEEN quick to raise questions of social responsibility with industries which pollute the air," Palmer said. "In my opinion, television through its access to air waves may be creating a more serious problem of air pollution."

The AMA chief said, "If the programming a child is exposed to consists largely of violent content, then his perceptions of the real world may be significantly distorted."

Palmer said he urged each of the 10 advertisers "to recognize the medical aspects of your advertising program and consider its impact on society."

"SINCE CONTACTING Sears Roebuck and Co.," he said, "I have learned that Sears has reviewed its corporate policy and will not knowingly place commercials in any programming that contains excessive violence or sanctions antisocial behavior."

The AMA also made the request to these corporations: General Motors, American Home Products, American Motors Corp., Eastman Kodak Co., Joseph Schlitz Brewing Co., Procter and Gamble Co., General Foods Corp., Burger King Corp., and PepsiCo, Inc.

Palmer also thanked companies he said support programs with little violence, including: Peter Paul, Inc.; Hallmark Cards, Inc.; Texaco, Inc.; Whirlpool Corp.; Prudential Insurance Co. of America; Squibb Corp.; Kusan Corp.; Green Giant Co.; Keebler Co. and Carnation Co.

One Act Play entitled "Saga of the Upholstered Board"

Scene: Office of the Sales Manager of the major mattress manufacturing company.

Sales Manager: What is this terrific new idea of yours?
Product Engineer: It's a new mattress with a board in the middle. It makes the mattress harder than - I mean it makes it very hard.

Sales Manager: Sounds good. We could call it the "Board-O-Pedic." The public wants hard mattresses today. We've been spending enough money telling them this for the last ten years.

Product Engineer: We do use a little foam padding, but with the board in the middle, you hardly feel the padding.

Sales Manager: Have you tried it yourself?

Product Engineer: Sure! I used it for three nights and it almost killed me. I hardly slept a wink. But it's harder than any of our competitors are making so it should sell.

Sales Manager: Maybe we should call it the "Upholstered Board?"

Product Manager: I don't know - there's a little company called Schaumburg Mattress Factory that makes fun of these hard mattresses. They tell their customers they shouldn't sleep on these "Upholstered Boards."

Sales Manager: How do you know so much about the Schaumburg Mattress Factory?

Product Engineer: That's where I bought my mattress and man, is it comfortable!!!

Exit: Product Engineer.

Hankering to Hustle? Disco lessons show how

by LAURA SCHIMBACH

Jeans and pullover sweaters replaced platform shoes and fancy silk shirts. The fluorescent overheads at Fremd High School in Palatine couldn't compare to the strobe lights on Rush Street. And Van McCoy wasn't the same on a record player that looked and sounded as if it were playing hooky from a junior high music class.

But the hankering to hustle won out over the initial foot dragging and less-than-inspiring soundings, and in no time the would-be disco dancers in Dist. 211's evening class were snapping their fingers and swaying their hips like (almost) old pros.

I was panic-stricken. AS A DROPOUT from my high school ballroom dance class, I never mastered a waltz, much less a Moon Walk — and the few discotheques I'd visited left me quietly sipping my gin and tonic and marveling at those Soul City Shufflers who could do The Stomp without stumbling. But when I realized disco dancing had eased its way into well-established dance studios, not to mention the hearts of a growing fan club, I decided it was worth a second look.

I was joined by approximately 25 other curiously seekers, ranging in ability from a savvy young couple who were hustling in perfect unison after five minutes to my partner, a subdued, white-haired gentleman who attended the class at the urging of his two daughters.

We started out with an innocuous "keep time" number that involved only four steps (so far, so good) and quickly moved on to that bastion of disco dancing, The Hustle. Armed with reassurances and detailed diagrams from instructor Kathy Schlock, I smiled nervously and plunged in — and confirmed my suspicions that while the six steps themselves were conquerable, it surely helped to have a knowledgeable and sympathetic pro telling me to "slide, don't step."

According to school districts, private dance studios and the discotheques themselves, I'm not alone. Disco dancing has boomed since its introduction in 1974, and with its increasing popularity there has been a corresponding need for instruction.

"WITH THE old free-style type of dancing, you could just lose your inhibitions and 'let it all hang out,'" said Alice Ann Green, an instructor at De'ores Eiler School of Dancing and The Time Machine discotheque in Des Plaines. "Not any more — here (with disco dancing) you just have to know the correct steps. It's really an art."

That required savoir-faire has led more than one observer to the conclusion that disco enthusiasts are nothing more than well-dressed robots eager to blend into the crowd, but Ms. Green prefers the theory that the intricate line dances "force people to think. It stimulates their minds, and I think people are ready for that right now."

Disco dancing was originally associated with something a little less than intellectual — go-go bars — and then moved into gay bars in New York City where "they gave it some class and style," said Ms. Green. The dances arrived in Chicago via private clubs like Faces along Rush Street, and now they're introduced by professional dancers on both coasts before they spread to the Windy City.

No one really knows how dances like The Stomp, Fever, Jazzy and The Slink were conceived, but the how-to sessions are attracting everyone from teenagers to senior citizens. Officials at Dist. 211 and 214 report that disco dancing is one of the first adult education classes to be filled, and De'ores Eiler of the De'ores Eiler School of Dancing says almost all the ballroom dance studios now have disco departments.

LESSONS ARE particularly helpful to couples in their thirties or forties who may not frequent discotheques but who have been exposed to the dances via weddings or private parties, said Ms. Schlock.

"For many people, (a school district) situation is a lot less inhibiting than the lessons offered at the discotheques themselves," she said. "Some of those dancers are so great that they inhibit everyone else, and it does take a lot of guts to get out there at first."

Cindy Manika, a dance teacher at Some Other Place in Glenview and The Time Machine in Des Plaines, agrees that "Oh, forget it" is a common reaction, even among the younger dancers who are well acquainted with pulsating beats and mirrored dance floors.

"At first, everyone is afraid to get out there, and I get a lot of requests for private lessons," she said, "but once they know one or two steps, you can get them to stand on their heads. It's true that some people will never pick it up, but it's a lot easier than it looks."

THE KEY TO mastering the seven or eight couple dances and the 60 to 70 line dances (most of which come in and out every month or so) is recognizing that every variation is based on six or seven simple steps, the instructors said.

Don't be fazed by the professionalism of a regular, remember to watch your feet at first, not the other dancers, and don't try to imitate a dancer's style — it can't be learned and takes plenty of practice to acquire, they added.

Surprisingly, older dancers may have the edge when it comes to disco because many of the steps are based

KEEPING UP WITH the latest disco dances isn't always easy, but professional advice, a few diagrams and lots of enthusiasm help. So does a familiarity with old steps like the soft shoe, updated here to The Shuffle by disco expert Van McCoy, original of The Hustle.

on ballroom dances. The Swing, the current favorite, is an update of the jitterbug, and oldies but goodies like "Granada" and "Baby Face" are staging comebacks via the disco beat. But regardless of its popularity, disco dancing isn't for everyone. Ms. Eiler noticed that many older men pass it up because "they still like to hold a girl in their arms," and one local instructor reported that in many discotheques, "the good looking or popular girls don't have to know how to dance... they've got other things to go on."

So it's back to the gin and tonics with a clear conscience. Who knows, maybe I'll pick up the Doo Da yet.

Carter's assistant a White House first

by MIKE FEINSILBER

Midge Costanza laughs when she remembers her first day at her new job.

"I was sitting at my desk when my secretary came in all excited and said, 'Midge, the - the - the President is here!'"

"You know, you forget where you are. I was about to ask her, 'The president of what?' when he walked in."

"I shouted, 'Jimmy! — I mean Mr. President!'"

"And he said, 'Hi.'"

MISS COSTANZA Margaret formally and "Midge" to everyone who knows her, is the first woman to serve in the White House as assistant to the President. And you can bet she's excited about it.

Before January, she had never set foot in the White House. Jimmy Carter telephoned her Christmas Day to offer her the job.

Later, Midge was visiting Washington. Her flight home to Rochester, N.Y., was delayed. So she gave in to temptation and telephoned John Marsh, an aide to former President Gerald Ford, to ask to see his office — the White House office she would occupy.

"I'm walking up the driveway to the front door of the White House," she says, "and I had this feeling of awe and respect. Suddenly I realized what I was wearing — blue jeans! Somehow I felt awe and anguish at the same moment."

Midge cringed when Marsh told her that Charles

Colson had previously occupied the office, — a sun filled blue-and-white room with an early American decor and a proximity to the Oval Office that suggests power.

WHEN COLSON worked for Richard Nixon, he was known as a tough operator. He once said he would walk over his grandmother to re-elect Nixon.

Midge's job is to woo grandmothers, not walk over them.

She is Carter's emissary to organized groups, including senior citizens, women, consumers, blacks, Hispanic-Americans, the young and the handicapped. She is to represent him to these groups and to see that their views are made known to him.

Officials of organizations, eager to establish contact, have been telephoning her at the rate of 350 calls a day. In the first 10 days on the job, she received 3,000 letters.

MIDGE HAS LEARNED that work in the White House can mean a seven-day-a-week commitment. But she says she is used to long hours. Occasionally in Rochester, she says, she would work around the clock, foregoing sleep entirely, going home only for a shower, then returning to work.

"All I want when I leave here," she says, "is to know I helped the American people feel that they were part of the government. I want to help Jimmy Carter keep his commitment."

Midge, 44, is one of four children of a retired manufacturer of Italian sausages who came to the United States from Sicily.

Her rise to a White House post reflects Carter's belief in her, and hers in him.

For 24 years she had been an aide to a real estate developer and a Democratic party workhorse in Rochester. In 1973, she ran for a seat on City Council.

SHE WON WITH more than any other candidate. By tradition in Rochester, the City Council names the top vote-getter as mayor.

But Midge, the first woman ever elected to the council, was denied that honor. She was named vice mayor instead. She considers herself a victim of sexism.

In 1974, she unsuccessfully ran for Congress against Rep. Barber Conable, R-N.Y. Carter, still governor of Georgia and the Democrats' 1974 campaign chairman, offered to speak for her.

The night Carter appeared on her behalf at a reception, she was tied up in a council session. By the time she arrived, she says, Carter had introduced himself to each of the 200 guests, saying, "My name is Jimmy Carter and I'm waiting for Midge."

THAT WAS THE first of five trips Carter made to Rochester. Last spring it was her turn to help him. Midge was Carter's upstate chairman in the New York primary. In July she spoke for him at the Democratic convention.

"He said he asked me to second his nomination because my natural love of life would come through," she said.

"It was probably the highest compliment of my life."

Planning spring wardrobe lifts winter spirits

Dear Readers: I've just about decided that we gals who sew have to be the luckiest gals alive. Notice how depressed everyone seems to be after the holidays — but not us. We know that sewing takes time, so we're champing at the bit to plan our spring wardrobes.

Who could ever be blue browsing through an exciting fabric shop crammed with new ideas, exciting glorious colors, and new textures to work with? It's like a shot in the arm and gives you a feeling that you can't buy in a bottle.

Today's column will bring you fabric news direct from the American Designer Collections. Fortunately, the same fabrics are available to the home sewer as well as the top designers and manufacturers.

FOR SUITS AND coats — the foundation of your new wardrobe — consider wool gabardine suiting made of a combination of fibers such as wool, linen, silk, rayon and polyester. These combinations often bring you the best of each fiber, either in performance, appearance or touch. Mohairs are the most luxurious of all fabrics for lightweight, airy, unlined coats and jackets.

You'll find an abundance of soft, crepe de chins in either polyester or luxurious pure silk. These are often combined with poplins, linens, or wools for blouses, soft tunics and pants.

Bare-top dressing calls for sheer "see-thru" coverups of chiffon, georgette and eyelets.

Cotton eyelet embroideries are everywhere, from petticoats, blouses, scarfs, shawls, and dresses — both long and short. They're so fresh and feminine, and this is the year for that.

Taffeta continues to be a favorite with designers for evening, including plaid taffeta for blazers, skirts and tunics.

LINENS AND fibranses (linen texture made of twisted rayon yarns that prevent wrinkling) are everywhere, especially in sportswear. Cottons have come into their own. Yes, women are even willing to put up with a wrinkle or two for the comfort of cotton.

Look for madras, gabardine, batiks, cotton knits, cotton batiste and jawns and cotton terry.

Hopefully, this has given you a little idea of what is in store for you. Depending on the area where you live, you can pick and choose and combine these to get the most from your clothes. With air conditioning in the warmer climates, dressing doesn't vary too much to day around the country.

Dear Eunice Farmer: What is the difference between a plaid fabric and a Tattersall plaid? I have read where the latter is newer for Spring. — Mrs. Mason B.

Dear Mrs. B.: You are very observant. The tattersall look is the newest for spring. It is a outline of a plaid, usually with only a thread or two outlining it. These threads may be in a contrasting color, but give a tracery or much lighter effect to the fabric.

A windowpane plaid is another type of tattersall. It is a more even plaid, but again, only outlined with one or more threads instead of blocks of color.

Sew simple

Eunice Farmer, Box 4994, Des Moines, Iowa 50306.

Dear Eunice Farmer: There have been several patterns lately that have called for a 5-inch zipper. None of the notion suppliers in our area carry them. Is it all right to use a 7-inch zipper or should I try to cut off the end of a longer zipper? (I tried that once and the key came off at the end.) — Mrs. J.K.

Dear Mrs. J.K.: When a pattern calls for an off-size zipper, it was made expressly for the designer and is very seldom available to the home sewer.

It is rather simple to shorten a zipper, however. Measure for the exact length. Then, either machine stitch several times across the proper length or hand whip over the teeth securely. Cut the excess off at least one inch below the desired length.

After applying the zipper to your garment, take the straight eye from a hook and eye set and sew it straight across the zipper where you wish it to end. The metal eye permanently prevents the key from sliding down below this point.

Today's winner of a set of gold blazer buttons is: Mrs. Sylvia Goodling, RD 2, Box 158, York, Pa. 17403.

Here's her winning tip: "When sewing curves such as pocket flaps, rounded collars and rounded cuffs, it's easier than you think to make perfect curves. Just continue with your straight seam stitching to the cut edge of both sides — as you would if the corners were square or pointed.

"With a smaller length stitch, go back about two inches before the corner and stitch over the previous seam until you come close to the corner. Curve your stitching to round the corner and continue stitching until you re-stitch over your previous stitching an inch or two. You will not only have reinforced rounded corners, but they should be nice and even every time.

The doctor says

Iron deficiency may explain eating ice

My wife eats a lot of ice. Do you think it would hurt her in any way?

The ice won't, but the reason she is eating lots of ice might be important. People sometimes develop a habit of eating large amounts of strange things, including clay, laundry starch and ice. There are medical reports of some people eating over four pounds of ice a day.

Such strange eating habits are associated with iron deficiency. Usually, if that is the problem, replenishing the body stores with iron will correct the problem. We call this condition pica. It is of medical importance when children are picking off old paint containing lead from old buildings and getting lead poisoning.

If nothing else, I think you should have your wife at least take a daily vitamin tablet that contains iron. She may not be anemic and still have an iron deficiency. When this is the cause of strange eating habits, once the iron deficiency is corrected, the person may have an aversion to the food that was once an obsession. Your wife may then not care for ice at all.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 4-4, Iron and Anemia, to give you other information in iron deficiencies. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Write to me in care of Paddock Publications, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Yesterday my sister offered my mother some wine she had made. I told my mother she shouldn't drink wine when she is taking medicine. In a rude manner my sister told me to shut up and my mother said the little medicine she takes doesn't make any difference.

My mother takes 15 mg. of Triavil a day. She has been suffering from severe psychosis for over 40 years. The first part of this year she had a complete mental breakdown. Her doctor told me she should not drink alcohol while she is taking tranquilizers.

I have heard that alcohol prevents medicine from doing its job. Is that right? How much alcohol can a person drink while taking medicine without doing any harm?

Don't be upset with your sister. She probably doesn't understand the problem. I must warn people, though, that when the doctor says no alcohol it means no alcohol!

It is not just a question of whether the alcohol will prevent the medicine from working effectively. In some instances it causes the medicine to be far stronger than intended. Thus a person taking sleeping pills and alcohol may get a combined effect that is far worse than the same amount of either would have been. That is how some individuals using the combination end up as suicides.

To take another example, Flagyl — a medicine used commonly in treatment of women's infections — reacts chemically with alcohol somewhat like Antabuse, used in treating alcoholics, and may cause nausea, vomiting and shock with circulatory collapse. In some cases the combination can be life-threatening.

Triavil is a combination medicine containing Elavil. Elavil acts with alcohol in the same way that barbiturates do and the combination can be dangerous.

How much is dangerous? That depends on what medicine the person is taking and how much. In some instances even a very small amount of alcohol can trigger an undesirable reaction as I mentioned in reference to Antabuse. Its action in this regard is helpful in forcing an alcoholic to not touch a single drink.

I often wonder how many patients realize the importance of following instructions. Failure to do so may have more serious consequences in some instances than just failure to obtain the maximum benefits from treatment.

Cat box granules used on sidewalk, driveway

Dear Dorothy. Like so many others bedeviled by snow and ice this year, my aunt has gone to something new. She writes to say they've been using the granules used to line kitten boxes instead of salt on their driveway and sidewalk. She seems delighted that she won't have to worry about salt ruining the grass. Thought you would like to pass this on. But I'm puzzled as to how this stuff melts ice. — Ann Barrow

It doesn't melt the ice. However, like sand or cinders, it keeps one from slipping and sliding on the ice. Some people keep a sack of these granules in their car trunks for use if they get stuck in snow. It's a product I'm sure has many more uses than any of us have thought of yet.

Dear Dorothy: Normally, I don't do heavy kitchen cleaning this time of year, but the inside of my white enamel kitchen cabinets were so dingy I tried washing them with a regular spray detergent. No luck. What did work was a paste of chlorine bleach with some powdered laundry detergent (no bleach in it), wiped on with a sponge and wiped off with a wet sponge. Cabinets clean and sparkly. — Catherine Greenwood

Dear Dorothy: When buying a fresh coconut, how can you tell if it's good? — Andrea Melle
When shaking the nut be sure you hear the milk sloshing around. Nuts with moldy or wet "eyes" are not good. Most you'll find are good. Just keep them cold and use as soon as possible.

Dear Dorothy: Most of the books say to put waxed paper between hamburger patties before freezing them. I've found that it's far easier to separate them with cut-up cardboard inserts. — Nancy Graziano

Secret eaters, bingers can find help in class

Registration is now in progress for a new session in Eat and Trim to begin Monday, Feb. 21, at the Northwest Suburban YMCA, 300 E. Northwest Highway, Des Plaines. Identical classes will be offered morning and evening.

Eat and Trim is designed for women who are: subject to erratic weight fluctuations, compulsive eaters or bingers, secret eaters, full of guilt and remorse after the escapade is over, powerless to correct food intake, but willing to retrain eating habits for life by behavior modification.

Offered at various skill levels, level one is an introduction to techniques needed for permanent weight control. It features awareness of behavior as women learn to record hourly all licks, tastes and bites of food consumed. At this level the women learn the six factors absolutely necessary for continual success in reaching their goals as well as the 40 reasons for compulsive eating. Individuals will work on their own personal eating profiles.

LEVEL 2, WHICH will be offered in April, will stress actual techniques to curtail destructive behavior such as slowing down eating, eating in one place, and consuming food without taking part in any other activity at the same time.

Preventive Nutrition will be offered Wednesday evening and Thursday morning with exercise for those who want information on losing weight correctly without injuring health, but who do not care to go into behavior change.

Simple is chic in D.C. these days

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Chauffeur-driven bureaucrats still abound in Washington, but President Carter's disdain for the "royal" aspects of government is making them very unchic.

If Carter's denunciations of "ostentatiousness" and "living like royalty" aren't enough to make the riders uncomfortable, they should get the message from White House press secretary Jody Powell, who plans to use his 1966 Volkswagen if he can get it running again.

Despite the President's antifrill campaign, Sen. William Proxmire estimates nearly 800 "government big shots" still are driven to and from work each day at taxpayer expense.

"I THINK PEOPLE are likely to emulate the President more than any other figure," the Wisconsin Democrat said. If Carter "doesn't take advantage of perquisites, it's much harder for other people to do it. But it will take longer than just a couple of weeks."

While Carter has eliminated home-to-work chauffeur service for White House staff, all members of his Cabinet still use it. Housing Sec. Patricia Harris is chauffeured mornings but drives home with her husband at night.

Carter did not specifically ask Cabinet members to give up chauffeurs, but he told them to beware of temptations toward pomposity.

A UPI survey showed this response so far:

- Interior Sec. Cecil Andrus closed his "private dining room" and eats in the basement cafeteria with other employees. He cut the number of "pool" cars available from seven to three and eliminated two of the six assistant secretarieships.
- Housing Sec. Harris turned her dining room into a conference room and eats in the cafeteria.

• Labor Sec. Ray Marshall told aides to draft an "austerity program."

• Health, Education and Welfare Sec. Joseph Califano decided not to buy new furniture for his office and he eats in the HEW cafeteria. But his No. 2 man still has door-to-door chauffeur service.

• Treasury Sec. W. Michael Blumenthal uses a bulletproof limousine but has dropped door-to-door service for his No. 2 man.

• Budget Director Bert Lance drives his own car to work.

• Transportation Sec. Brock Adams doesn't use the military aide his predecessors had and he may ask a civilian agency to run the cafeteria and send the Coast Guard cooks "back to coast-guarding."

• Sec. of State Cyrus Vance uses the same black Chrysler sedan he had during transition days, foregoing Henry Kissinger's armor-plated Cadillac. The former undersecretary's BMW has been replaced by the new man's VW camper.

• Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell discontinued FBI bodyguard protection, freeing five agents who worked part-time for his predecessor.

• Agriculture Sec. Bob Bergland rode a commercial jet on his first official trip to Florida last week but went first class. Aides said he needed the extra space to do paperwork.

• Pentagon officials using door-to-door chauffeur service were cut from 46 to 12 during the Ford administration, and that still stands. Sec. Harold Brown is "looking into further austerity measures."

• House Speaker Thomas O'Neill, asked if he would give up his limousine, said he doesn't ride in it "as much as you think." Just that day, he said, he rode to work with another congressman instead.

Is Carter's campaign a step in the right direction?

Rep. Paul Simon, D-Ill., who often drops in unannounced on government agencies to see how they operate, thinks so.

Queen marks 25th year as monarch

WINDSOR, England (UPI)—While Poet Laureate Sir John Betjeman's "Jubilee Hymn" was sung at Albert Hall and royal photographs smiled from the front pages of every national newspaper Sunday, Queen Elizabeth II marked without pageantry or fanfare her 25th anniversary as Britain's monarch.

Her personal observance of the occasion differed from the nation's celebration because the day of her accession to the throne — Feb. 6, 1952 — was also the day her father, King George VI, died.

Feb. 6, 1977 was marked by the queen quietly at Windsor Castle in the company of her family.

THE 54-YEAR-OLD Elizabeth, with her husband Prince Philip and other members of the royal family, attended Sunday morning services at Royal Chapel in the private grounds of Royal Lodge, four miles from the castle.

Later they prepared for the first of the queen's Silver Jubilee year journeys to Commonwealth countries — a seven-week visit to Australia, New Zealand, Western Samoa, Tonga, Fiji and Papua, New Guinea.

Twenty-five years ago Princess Elizabeth and Philip were at the Treetops Hotel in Kenya observing wild animals when she received the word that her father had died of cancer.

Within a few hours a blackclad Elizabeth, now her Most Excellent Majesty Elizabeth II, was flying back to London.

SHE HAD TRAVELED for months with the black mourning outfit — with the knowledge that she at any moment might be called to London to succeed her father on the throne.

The kingdom whose reign she accepted that day was very different from the way it is today.

There was still a British Empire — sometimes called a Commonwealth.

QUEEN ELIZABETH II shakes hands with the Dean of Windsor Chapel as she and members of the royal family leave chapel following services. The queen marked without pageantry her 25th anniversary as Britain's monarch.

The Suez Canal crisis that erased the last vestiges of Empire was four years in the future. And Liberia was the only independent black state in Africa.

"No monarch has seen such changes," the Guardian newspaper said Saturday.

The national consensus today — even in an age when many question the monarchy's relevancy — is that Queen Elizabeth II has weathered those changes admirably. Some even go further and suggest that she was the glue that kept Britain together during the difficult years of the decline of the empire.

Criminal spends time with victim, not in jail

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government is spending $2 million to help evaluate a concept in which criminals instead of being sent to jail, are ordered to repay their victims through work.

Richard Velde, chief of the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, Sunday said this form of justice is a "much more positive approach to rehabilitation."

The agency said it has issued $2 million in grants to help finance a two-year evaluation of the concept in seven states — California, Colorado, Connecticut, Georgia, Maine, Massachusetts and Oregon.

THE CONCEPT has been tried in several areas with promising results, it said.

One success story involved a burglar who was caught breaking into a minister's home. He was ordered to work for the clergyman. And three years later, the minister performed a marriage ceremony for the ex-burglar and his bride.

In another case, a youth stole and wrecked a car. Instead of going to jail he was ordered to work for the insurance company to repay it for the loss.

The company later hired him on a regular basis, with a promotion.

A third example involved a businessman who started drinking heavily and was caught passing bad checks. He was ordered to work for his state's corrections department. Eventually he became a regular staff member, assigned to help alcoholics.

INDICATIONS ARE, Velde said, that the concept "saves taxpayers large sums of money and helps ease overcrowding in jails and prisons."

One question the administration hopes to answer is whether offenders should make restitution directly to the victim or to the community in the form of work at a hospital or other institution.

Other questions are whether this form of rehabilitation would be lasting, what is fair restitution and should the victim have a say about it.

The amounts of the grants are: California $220,496, Colorado $250,000, Connecticut $288,000, Georgia $356,195, Maine $169,104, Massachusetts $97,435 and Oregon $215,000. The program began last October.

Boyle's prison bail hearing today

MEDIA, Pa. (UPI)—W.A. (Tony) Boyle, 74, will have a bail hearing today that may lead to his release from the jail where he was sent to serve three consecutive life terms for ordering the murder of United Mine Workers Union rival Joseph Yablonski.

Boyle's attorney, A. Charles Peruto, had asked for the bail hearing 10 days ago after the state Supreme Court ordered a retrial for Boyle.

"I see no reason why bail would be denied," Peruto said. "It was not a capital case. The death penalty not being involved, he's entitled to bail."

Boyle, who is in the state correctional institution in Pittsburgh, was not expected to attend the hearing before Delaware County Court Judge Francis Catania.

Boyle has a severe heart ailment and is still suffering from the after effects of a drug overdose before his arrest in 1973.

Richard Sprague, the former Philadelphia first assistant district attorney who served as special prosecutor in the Boyle case, was expected to attend the hearing.

Sprague, now special counsel to the House committee on assassinations, has asked the state high court to reconsider its retrial order.

Counselors should focus on cop duties

Police duties, not counseling, should be the main focus of the counselor-in-the-park program, according to a report prepared for the Arlington Heights Village Board.

"The vast majority of counselors admit that counseling in the traditional sense of the word on a one-to-one basis is practically impossible given the situation," Edward Geiss, village human relations coordinator, said in a report to trustees.

"It is clear that the problems require police solutions, the counselor in the park program would best be redirected as an arm of the police department," he said.

Geiss and Village Mgr. L. A. Hansen recommended goals for the program be adopted. The goals would seek the following:

- To substantially reduce the cost and incidence of vandalism to parks and to property owners surrounding park areas while counselors are present;

- To eliminate the consumption of alcoholic beverages and narcotics within park areas;

- To counsel those present against the use of offensive language and instill in youths alternatives to disorderly behavior;

- To coordinate the counseling program with the park district for planning recreational programs.

To implement the goals the report recommends twice-monthly meetings among counselors, police, park district representatives and Geiss.

A CRIME REPORTING network of residents living near parks and a requirement for park district officials to report problems in the parks to police also is suggested.

A duty log will be kept by each counselor who will work with police assigned to problem parks.

The report also asks for enforcement of the park district's 11 p.m. closing time.

Geiss recommended financing for the program be shared by the village, which currently pays for the project, and the park district.

Shop center plan faces building delay

Construction of a shopping center approved by the Village of Arlington Heights three years ago for the intersection of Rand and Palatine roads apparently will not begin for at least nine months.

Officials for Jack Jacobs and Co., whose plan for an enclosed shopping mall on the 32-acre site was approved in 1974, have asked for another extension.

The village board will consider the request at 8 p.m. today at the municipal building, 33 S. Arlington Heights Rd.

Dist. 25 panel to tell endorsements today

The Arlington Heights Dist. 25 nominating committee tonight will endorse candidates to run for the two board of education positions to be filled in the April 9 election.

Nine nominees for the two three-year terms will each give a five-minute talk before the committee and will be questioned by delegates beginning at 8 p.m. today in the gymnasium at South Junior High School, 314 S. Highland.

Endorsements will be made at the end of the meeting, which is open to the public.

Board candidates do not need the endorsement of the nominating committee to seek election.

Why pay the government money you could save for retirement?

It's much better off at Home.

Here's a surprise. You might be able to take a tax deduction for money you save for retirement.

How? Two ways.

First, if you're self-employed, you can open a Keogh account at Home Federal Savings. Every year you deposit up to 15% of your income ($7,500 is the maximum deposit). This applies to part-time as well as full-time self-employment, so all you moonlighters and free-lancers out there, take notice.

The second way is if you aren't participating in a qualified pension plan where you work. You can open an Individual Retirement Account at Home Federal and deposit 15% of your income every year up to a $1,500 maximum.

All these deposits are tax-deductible. That's a pleasant surprise. But there's more to come.

While you're protecting your money from taxes, we'll be making it grow with the highest interest allowed by federal regulation. For example:

Annual Deposit	$ 1,500	$ 7,500
Balance with compound interest 10 years	$ 23,701	$118,504
20 years	$ 75,698	$378,488
30 years	$189,773	$948,866

This chart is based on our current 7 3/4% annual interest plan, based on certificate terms of 6 to 10 years. Current rates cannot be guaranteed past the initial term selected, or any renewal period. Figures shown are rounded off to the nearest whole dollar.

When you retire, we have some other great plans that can give you a steady, secure monthly income, further limitation of your tax liability and continued high earnings.

So why send more money to Washington than you have to? You can do much better at Home.

Visit any Home Federal office or use the coupon in this ad to find out more about our tax sheltered pension plans.

You can do better at Home.

Wrestling Editor

Paul Preissing and Dan Weber are small guys who carried a lot of weight Saturday.

The veteran Arlington wrestlers both roared to individual titles at the Fremd-hosted Mid-Suburban conference tourney, earning their team a meet crown while helping Wheeling snap over-all conference honors for 1977.

Team-wise, it was a strange and unusual race to the wire. The Wildcats, along with Conant, had sailed into the tournament as dual meet champs sharing the inside track on over-all laurels.

But out of nowhere came the Cardinals, a fourth place team from the North, along with third place North division entry Buffalo Grove, to nearly steal the MSL grappling show.

Ironically, it was the Bison putting on the best display of all in the Saturday night finale and the Bison coming up with nothing really for their efforts.

As it turned out, the tourney showings of the 106-pound Preissing and 119-pound Weber were too much for Buffalo Grove to overcome and the over-all strength of Coach Bob Schulze and his 'Cats were too much for anyone to overcome.

Two Wheeling wrestlers claimed blue ribbons with Dave Walters breezing to the throne at 145 while Ken Kent reclaimed his heavyweight title. The Wildcats finished third in the tourney for 11 points and coupled with the six they gained by dominating dual meet action in the North, it gave them 17 points for the season. Arlington, Buffalo Grove and Conant all wound up in an over-all tie for second with 16 points apiece.

"There were too many ifs," sighed Bison mentor Dennis Rice, who saw four of his five finalists all battle to championships Saturday evening. "Losing (Tim) Foley was probably the biggest if, but you have to give credit to Wheeling and Arlington too. Arlington turned in a super performance in the tourney and Wheeling was outstanding all season long."

Foley, who may have given his club a little more firepower at 119 (he was number two seeded), suffered his second shoulder separation of the campaign and defaulted in the semis.

Arlington's Gil Darmofal went the same disappointing route at 132 with the same kind of injury after pulling off a couple upset wins. Meanwhile, Card coach Jack Cutlip was able to compensate by getting second place mileage from Jason Slezak at 185 and a third place windup from Tom Thieszen at 98 as his club piled up 115½ tournament points to 111 for the Bison, 110 for Wheeling, 87 for Conant, 79 for Elk Grove and 70 for Palatine.

Top-seeded Preissing was almost methodical in grinding out an 11-3 major decision over Ray Auger of the Wildcats in a 105 division that came off pretty much as expected. Darcy Rice of Hoffman Estates, the returning 98-pound champ, was third.

Weber, also seeded one, built up a 7-1 lead over unranked Grenadier Tim Bush in two periods and then coasted to his title triumph. At 119 the third place finisher — Al Blount of Conant — was also a returning (105) MSL champ.

First place honors at 98 went to smooth-working Gren Jay Evans. He lived up to his No. 1 billing with a 7-2 verdict over second-seeded Mark Zeller of Schaumburg.

Cougar Jon Gluck was another top seed making his way to a title. The gritty junior, who finished second at 105 last winter, turned back unseeded Scott Zust of Palatine in the 112 finals by letting Zust up to slip behind 5-4 in the last round and then gaining the crucial takedown with just 25 seconds to go.

Steve King of Elk Grove finished third at 112.

The 126-pound division produced a big upset in the semifinals when Tom ed Curt Gordon of the Hawks 10-2. Smith, in turn, was stopped in the finals by Bison Dave Millay, 9-3, while another unseeded grappler, Lance Gackowski of Palatine claimed third.

Kirt Lewis of Buffalo Grove dominated the 132-pound finals, chewing up top-ranked Mike Reif of Wheeling, 6-1, while issuing him only his second setback in 27 bouts this season.

At 132 the hosts had one of their scant few moments for cheering too, when Jeff Penn of the Vikings snared a third.

The title bout at 138 went right down to the wire before John Brennan of Conant pulled off a triumph over Bison Greg Thomson, 3-1. Brennan took Thomson down with five seconds remaining in the third period.

Walters won at 145 by stopping Hoffman's Roger Fournier 7-1 after Fournier had edged second-seeded Keith Ryan of the Cougars 3-1 in the Smith of Forest View rocked top-seeded semis. In the meantime unranked Bruce Temesy of the Huskies scrapped his way to a third place windup.

Fast start keeps Falcons on top

Judy Schmidt scored 14 points to lead undefeated Forest View to a 46-29 Mid-Suburban League South win over visiting Rolling Meadows Saturday in girls basketball.

Forest View, now 4-0 in conference, broke to a giant 22-3 lead by halftime. Also in double figures for the winners was Debbie Drinkman with 11 points. Denise Reitmeyer was tops for the Mustangs (1-2) with five.

Lion swimmers splash to top league position

by BOB GALLAS

Back in early December the St. Viator swimming team was struggling as it finished dead last in the New Trier College Events Invitational.

Freestyle Chris Stewart was swimming with a cast on his broken wrist, freshman distance ace Mike Harvey was out with sickness and Jon Newcomer had been in the water only one day since coming back from illness.

But since then the Lions haven't lost a meet, and they proved their strength again by coming back to win their conference meet for the second year in a row.

VIATOR TOOK seven firsts and five seconds in the meet, but still had to finish hard to clip runnerup Marmion by two points.

"I still can't figure out how we got behind with all those firsts and seconds," said Viator coach Ernie Buchanan, who notched his first conference crown since taking over the head coaching reigns this season. "But in some events, like the 100-freestyle, we took first, but Marmion outpointed us by filling in behind. And we didn't have anybody in the 50 (yard freestyle) or diving."

The Lions won the title without resting any of their top swimmers, who are pointing to the Arlington District in two weeks. The Lions want that title badly.

"It will be our hardest challenge of the year for sure," Buchanan said. "But our team's been coming along since December."

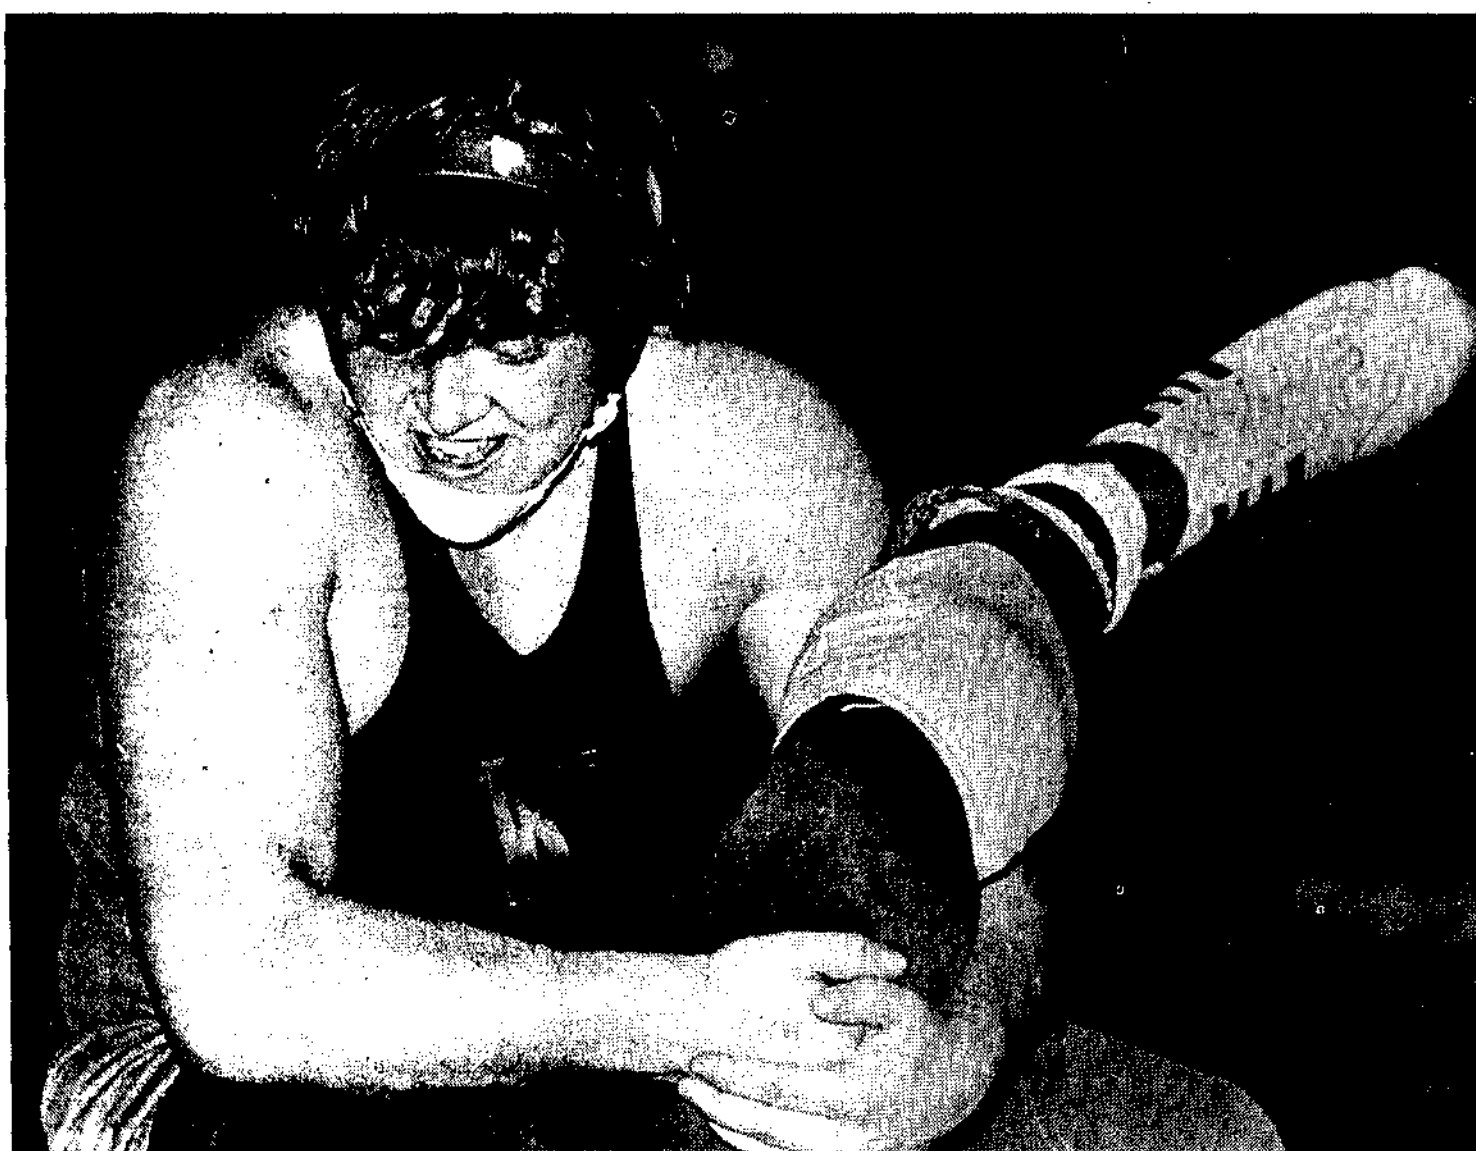

FINISHING THIRD behind Viator with 255 points and Marmion with 253 was St. Patrick's which scored 226. Far behind was Notre Dame in fourth, followed by Norgley South and Benet.

Chris Stewart led the Lions by taking two individual firsts and anchoring the Lions' winning free relay, which turned in a time of 3:25.2, the best in the Herald area so far this season.

Stewart won the 100-yard freestyle in 50.6 and 200-yard freestyle in 1:54.4. Freshman Mike Harvey won the 50-yard freestyle in 5:02.1 and finished

Forest View sizzles to 5170 seriesArea bowlers sparkle in districts

by ART MUGALIAN

Nancy Lachus credited a change in her delivery for helping her roll a 601 series Saturday to lead her Forest View teammates to the district bowling title at Fair Lanes Bowl.

Lachus piled up the 601 score in the afternoon session after she and teammate Judy Pleckhardt had paced coach Warren Myers' Falcons to a 210-pin lead over Prospect in the morning round. Forest View finished with an incredible pin total of 5170, more than 650 pins ahead of Prospect.

FOREST VIEW will join district winners Arlington and Conant (maybe) at the state meet next Saturday in Peoria. Winners from 25 other district meets at locations around Illinois will also vie for the state championship, won last year by Abingdon. Forest View was second.

"That was my second 600 series," said Lachus. "I had one practicing with a girl from our team last summer."

Lachus had rolled a 523 and Pleckhardt shot a 534 in the first round while teammates Cheryl Hanson (460), Karen Toppel (500), and Karen Ellingsworth (498) also contributed to the morning advantage.

"We just wanted to pile up a big lead," said Lachus, the Mid-Suburban League's top bowler with a 164 average.

Lachus, a four-year veteran, got off to a slow start this year but closed with a rush as Forest View finished second in league standings, the first time in four years the Falcons failed to win the MSL title.

"COACH MYERS changed my style," explained Nancy. "I had never been used to spot-bowling before. I used to just throw the ball at the pins and if I hit them, fine. It took me a while to adjust to the new delivery."

Lachus' 601 series was the highest ever rolled in a district or state-meet tourney and included a 256 game. All five Forest View scores in the afternoon were 500-plus. Pleckhardt had a 529, Toppel a 512, Ellingsworth, a freshman, 508, and Debbie Compton 504.

Arlington, the newly crowned Mid-

The 5170 for the Falcons also represents the biggest score ever produced in district or state competition.

"Being a math teacher, I had a lot of fun playing with those numbers," said Myers, who seemed almost stunned by his team's performance Saturday. "If we get hot, we could blow the state meet apart."

"But two things helped account for those high scores," Myers added. "First, you have to have a couple girls get hot and, second, we were bowling on our home lanes."

Arlington built a 161-pin first-round margin over host Hersey at Thunderbird Lanes in Mount Prospect, then held on in the afternoon when the Huskies put on a rush. Arlington's pin total was 4388.

Arlington, the newly crowned Mid-

Suburban champion, was led by junior Dana Wallner (450-438), sophomore Barb Dougherty (459-406), Carol Howland (458), and soph Nancy Weber (501).

"HERSEY HAD A good chance," said Huskie coach Walt Jasinski. "We just didn't bowl too hot in the morning. We picked up about one-half of what we needed in the afternoon."

The district's high series was rolled by Rhonda Maro of Buffalo Grove with a 515. Wheeling's Donna Hintze had a 204 game for top honors.

At the Elgin District, Conant rolled an impressive 4522 score, a scant 36 pins in front of Elgin and only 70 ahead of Schaumburg. It was a major upset for the Cougars, the MSL's 11th-place team.

BUT THEIR DISTRICT title may be taken away from them because the Cougars may have been bowling with an ineligible girl.

"It was a girl who was supposedly bowling in a night league and I didn't know anything about it," said Conant coach Nancy Wilcox. "Which is really disappointing."

Wilcox and her team were awaiting the results of an investigation Sunday afternoon. Runnerup Elgin would represent the district if the Cougars are disqualified.

NEW ROLE. Movie actor Paul Newman enjoys a beer after he and teammates Elliot Forbes and Milt Minter drove their Ferrari to a fifth place finish at the 24 Hours of Daytona road race. Another Ferrari won the 37-car event.

Fast Lietzke finish wins Hawaiian Open

HONOLULU — Bruce Lietzke, the handsome young man from Texas, given his chance when the veteran Don January double-bogeyed the 17th hole, moved in front and then closed out his senior of 22 years with an eagle on the final hole Sunday to win the $240,000 Hawaiian Open for his second victory in a month.

The 25-year-old Lietzke beat another veteran of the PGA wars — Gene Littler — in a five-hole playoff exactly four weeks ago to win the Tucson Open and, combined with a 12th place finish in the Crosby, he now has won $100,550 in four events.

In the Hawaiian, one of the richer events on this year's tour, Lietzke won $48,000 after a closing 69 gave him a 72-hole score of 15-under-par 273 and the victory by three shots over January and Japan's Takashi Murakami.

Andy Bean finished with a 69 to land in fourth place at 277, another shot ahead of Tom Watson, winner of the Crosby and San Diego Open the last two weeks, Lance Suzuki, Bill Kratzert and Steve Melnyk.

Watson had a final round 70 and thus saw his modest streak come to an end. With the streak gone he will take this week off and rejoin the Tour for the Los Angeles Open. Most everyone else, including Arnold Palmer, will play in the Hope Classic at Palm Springs, Calif. this week.

Porsche Carrera tops Daytona field

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — Trouble-free performance by their underdog Porsche Carrera put the team of Hurley Haywood, John Graves and Dave Helmick in the winner's circle Sunday afternoon in the 24 Hours of Daytona road race.

"The car ran perfectly," said Graves, 35, of Key Largo, Fla. "In review, it was a perfect race."

Haywood, 29, of Jacksonville, Fla., whose victory was his third in this endurance contest, said that other than a slight wheel vibration the car had no problems at all.

"The car ran like a Swiss watch," said Haywood. Helmick noted that the winning team's official entrant was "Ecurie Escargot," which roughly translates from the French as "Team Snail."

The trio took the lead just before the 21-hour mark on the 3.84-mile road course at Daytona International Speedway and finished more than two laps ahead of a more powerful turbo Porsche 935 driven by Italians Martino Finotto, Carlo Facetti and Camathias Romeo.

Bearcats nip 4th-ranked Marquette

CINCINNATI — Junior forward Mike Jones scored 20 points to lead 11th ranked Cincinnati to its 57th straight home victory Sunday, a thrilling 63-62 win over fourth-ranked Marquette.

Cincinnati held a comfortable 63-54 lead with 2:25 remaining, but never scored again as Marquette reeled off eight straight points.

Jerome Whitehead brought the Warriors to within 63-62 with seven seconds remaining and with just four seconds to go, Cincinnati's Bob Miller missed a free throw and the ball went out of bounds, thus giving Marquette the ball.

Butch Lee hurried down court, but his desperation 35-foot shot fell short, and although Bo Ellis grabbed the ball and tossed it in, the buzzer had already sounded before he got the shot away.

In another televised collegiate hookup, freshman guard Darrell Griffith canned two free throws with 1:29 remaining and added a breakaway slam dunk at the buzzer Sunday to give seventh-ranked Louisville a school record-tying 14th straight victory — 68-64 over Providence.

Another Santee skates to first

HARTFORD — James Santee of Park Ridge, Ill. won the Men's Novice title at the U.S. Figure Skating Championships Saturday after his older brother David could do no better than third in the Senior Men's division.

The younger Santee, 14, gained all seven first place votes to win handily at 114.46 points. His favored brother saw Charles Tickner of Littleton, Colo. sweep off with Senior Men's honors.

Jill Sawyer of Tacoma, Wash. won the Ladies' Novice title while another Illinois entry, Jacki Farrell of Roscoe, took a third. In the Senior Pairs, Frank Swelding of Prospect Heights, Ill. teamed up with Gail Hamula of Colorado Springs to claim a second.

Slims tournament opens in Chicago

CHICAGO — Three of the top eight seeded players, led by Margaret Court, will compete Monday in the opening round of the $100,000 Virginia Slims tournament at the International Amphitheatre.

Mrs. Court, seeded No. 2 in the event, will play Linky Boshoff Monday night in the feature match of the first round involving 32 players.

Other seeded players who will meet in action were Natasha Chmyreva, No. 3 seeded, who will meet Ingrid Benzer in another Monday evening match, while No. 8-seeded Carrie Meyer plays JoAnne Russell in the feature of the afternoon program.

Meanwhile, Chris Evert, playing her first difficult match of the tournament, stroked enough sharp angled shots Sunday to throw Martina Navratilova off balance and avenge an early season loss with 6-2, 6-4, victory in the championship of the $20,000 Virginia Slims of Seattle.

St. Viator falls, 64-49

Seasoned Shamrocks romp

by DOUG PALM

A wily observer once noted, that "there's just no substitute for experience."

The seasoned St. Patrick Shamrocks used their veteran lineup and height advantage to the maximum Saturday night in handling St. Viator's younger Lions a 64-49 loss in an East Suburban Catholic Conference affair on Viator's home floor.

An old Lion nemesis, inexperience, and its constant companions, turnovers, were the uninvited guests whose presence most undermined the recently surging Lions.

ST. VIATOR had achieved victory in its last three ESSC outings after dropping its opening five conference games. Consistency and a relatively low turnover ratio had marked the Lions' play throughout their recent turn-around.

St. Patrick, with six seniors among its first eight players, sought to intimidate the undermanned Lions, who were playing for the second night in succession without senior captain Steve Notaro (out with the flu).

From the game's outset, St. Pat's applied full-court pressure, with a zone press being the most effective defense employed by Shamrock coach Max Kurland.

Kurland later admitted that his team had entered the contest with full intentions of "taking advantage of their youth and inexperience by applying constant defensive pressure all over the court."

PRESSURE THE Lions they did, as St. Viator committed 30 turnovers. St. Patrick, in turn, converted 12 of those turnovers into 20 points, mostly on breakaway baskets.

The ESSC's front-running team also outbounded the Lions, 27-15, which further handicapped the Lions in their bid to extend their winning streak. While Lion center Paul Wiloff took 12 boards, St. Pat's limited Viator's starting forwards to one rebound apiece.

St. Viator coach Ron Cregier could not say whether his team's overtime victory against Carmel the night before had left his players flat, but pointed to "a lack of intensity on our part" as the most notable departure from the Lions' play of late.

WE LACKED the confidence which enables a team to play with poise. You cannot lose that edge; that belief in winning.

To their credit, the Lions never gave up and their hustle on defense forced St. Pat's to turn the ball over on 24 occasions. Many of those floor miscues occurred late in the game, when St. Pat's had a comfortable lead. On the whole, however, St. Viator was unable to convert the changeovers into points.

St. Viator matched the visitors' opening basket, but fell behind shortly thereafter and trailed, 16-4, with 1:53 remaining in the opening quarter.

Down 29-22 at the half St. Viator briefly challenged St. Pat's in the third quarter with Wiloff scoring six of his game high 18 points.

ST. PATRICK, however, refused to allow the Lions to come any closer than five points, at 39-34, with 14 seconds remaining in the third quarter.

With reserves Jim Klein and John Solari doing the bulk of the scoring, the Shamrocks held a 23-15 advantage in the final quarter to ensure a sweep of the season series. St. Patrick prevailed in the first meeting in Chicago, 66-51.

Kurland noted a marked improvement in St. Viator's play since the two teams last met on Dec. 10.

"Despite the similar margins of victory," said Kurland, "we had to struggle this time, and that's because they (St. Viator) have learned to play better as a team."

Cregier, his Lions now 3-6 in ESSC play and 12-7 over-all, tried to put the night's events in perspective.

"We've simply got to regroup and go after it again." The experience won't be lost.

Forest View clips Hoffman, 52-43

by RICK CHRISTOPHER

Taking nothing away from Forest View's fine performance Saturday night, you could sense that the Hoffman Estates Hawks were just going through the motions.

Following a disappointing loss to Rolling Meadows 52-43, the night before, the Hawks were caught flat-footed by a quick, aggressive and spirited Falcon squad, 59-42.

"I'm sure they (Hoffman) were down a little after their loss to Rolling Meadows, who just softened them up for us," Forest View coach Ted Wissen said after watching his team move into a tie with the Hawks at 5-4 in the MSL South.

"But our kids played an excellent game nonetheless. We put it to them at the end by hitting the open man."

THE LEAD changed hands five times and was tied another four times during the first half before the Falcons stormed for eight straight points in the last two minutes.

Behind 24-21 on an eight-foot bank shot by the Hawks' Ron Warring, the Falcons broke inside Hoffman's zone defense for their biggest lead of the half, 29-24.

"Forest View had the patience to wait for the open man on offense . . . and when they did, they were on," Hoffman coach Jerry Segebrecht said. "They shot well all night."

The Hawks lost even more ground to the Falcons from the free throw line as Hoffman earned just four attempts to the Falcons' 20. From the field, Forest View held a 23-20 margin.

THE BIG DIFFERENCE in the game came in the second half when Forest View's Jeff Martinski found the range consistently from 10 to 12 feet out.

The 6-2 junior forward ran a rampage through the Hoffman defense for a game-high 20 points. Starting and finishing the third quarter with a pair of 10-foot jumpers, Martinski connected for 12 points in the quarter to stretch the Falcons' lead to 44-34.

"Martinski just went wild in the second half," coach Segebrecht said.

Martinski has been the Falcons' leading scorer for the season with nearly a 14 point average and coach

Wissen confirms that "he's deadly from eight to 12 feet and down the baseline."

PICKING UP where he left off, Martinski hit a 10-foot bank shot at the start of the fourth quarter to set precedent for his teammates.

Forest View's Craig Chupek and Don Wiora added 12 and 10 points, respectively, to the Falcon win, with Chris Hanson connecting on a timely seven points.

The Falcons' wide margin of 18 points in the fourth quarter went unchallenged in the remaining minutes as reserves from both benches filtered into the game.

Leading scorer for Hoffman was Joe Tully with 13.

Wheeling wrestlers overall champs

The 167-pound championship match was a sluggish affair that saw favored Chris Rugg of Buffalo Grove extracting a 5-2 overtime decision form Prospect's Carl Schimmelman after Tom Wisniewski of the Hawks had latched onto third place.

By contrast, the action was fast and furious at 185 and wound up in the session's only pin. Slezak, who had earned a berth in the finals by knocking off top-seeded Falcon Lon Reitz, fell behind Pirate Scott Santoro 15-6 during a big second-period flurry and was then stuck at 3-49.

Bob Schaefer of Hersey finished third at 185.

The heavyweight championship saw Kent's pinning power neutralized by big Bill Chauncey of Rolling Meadows but Kent still maneuvered enough for a 6-0 triumph, upping his record to 25-1-1. Cougar Matt Bello wrestled back into third.

Wheeling's first MSL wrestling crown interrupted Hersey's six-year rule of the conference mats. Another irony of Saturday's windup was that the Huskies began their reign in 1971 — coinciding with the inception of a league wrestling tournament — and the last team to win the crown before Hersey took over was none other than Cuthip's Arlington Cardinals.

Knight dazes Bulls in Pacer win

INDIANAPOLIS — The Indiana Pacers, sparked by the scoring of Billy Knight and Wil Jones and the playmaking of Dan Buse, rolled over the Chicago Bulls Sunday, 111-99, in a regionally televised NBA game.

Knight, the league's third-leading scorer, scored 23 points in three periods, four below his average, while Jones had 20.

The closest Chicago came was with three points but a Buse steal early in the final stanza gave the Pacers a 95-77 lead, their biggest, and they coasted from there.

Dan Roundfield had 16 points and Buse and Dave Robisch 14 apiece for Indiana.

Norm Van Lier and Artis Gilmore topped Chicago with 19 points apiece, but Gilmore was held scoreless from the field in the first half.

In other NBA action Sunday:

Mix sparks 76ers

Steve Mix scored 37 points to ignite a 102-97 victory by the Philadelphia 76ers win over the Los Angeles Lakers.

The 76ers led 80-66 entering the last quarter and then held off a series of Laker rallies. The Lakers made it 93-88 with 3:22 left, but a free throw by Caldwell Jones, a basket by Henry Bibby and two fouls by Mix made it 98-89 with 2:23 left.

Mix, who came off the bench late in the opening quarter, sparked Philadelphia by hitting 13 of 20, scoring 15 of his points in the second quarter as Philadelphia built a 51-37 lead at halftime.

Jazz rocks Rockets

The New Orleans Jazz held leading Houston Rockets scorer Rudy Tomjanovich to just one point and got 43 points from Pete Maravich to defeat the Rockets 99-90.

Maravich scored 35 of his points in the first half, including a 17-point spree in the first period which put the Jazz in front for good. They led 31-26 at the end of the period.

Tomjanovich, who has a 23-point per game average, was bounded for most of the game by Jazz guard E. C. Coleman. He missed on all of the four field goal attempts he made in his 34 minutes and sank only one free throw.

Bubbles strikes again

Robert "Bubbles" Hawkins tossed in 15 of 20 field goal tries for a career high of 37 points as the New York Nets ran their current winning streak to three games with a 94-90 NBA victory over the Cleveland Cavaliers.

Hawkins netted 14 second period points to spark the Nets to 47-33 half-time lead and the 6-4 second-year guard from Illinois State hit two key foul shots with 16 seconds left in the game to give the Nets a 94-88 lead.

The Cavs, who trailed from the opening tip off, tied the score at 88-88 with :50 left on a rebound by Elmore Smith, but Al Skinner swished a 10-footer 20 seconds later to put the Nets ahead to stay.

Spurs club Knicks

Larry Kenon ignited a late first-half surge and Louie Dampier scored nine points in a row in the final period to give San Antonio a 119-96 victory over the New York Knicks.

It was San Antonio's seventh win in nine games and New York has now lost nine of its last 10 road games.

After opening up a large lead in the second quarter San Antonio had its margin cut to eight points before running off a 16-2 stretch against the Knicks. Kenon scored eight of those 16 points.

And by the time Dampier got through with his steak in the fourth quarter San Antonio had boosted its lead to 21 points.

Phoenix nudges Nuggets

Paul Westphal, Ron Lee and Alvan Adams combined for 38 points to lead the Phoenix Suns to a 115-104 win over Denver.

Westphal had 32 points, Lee 30 and Adams 26.

David Thompson led Denver with 27 points followed by Dan Issel with 24. Phoenix went ahead midway in the first quarter and led throughout the first half with a 58-51 advantage at halftime.

Thompson got eight points in the opening four minutes of the third quarter to trigger a 65-64 Denver lead.

But after a tie at 66, Adams' layup and a jumper by Tom Van Arsdale put the Suns ahead to stay.

Lanier-Jess Pistons win

Bob Lanier scored 20 points, half of them in the third quarter before being ejected for fighting, to lead the Detroit Pistons to a 130-111 victory over Kansas City Sunday and a season sweep of their four-game series with the Kings.

Lanier had just pulled in with a rebound when, apparently irked because of a bump from Jim Eakins, he decked the frightened Kansas City center with one punch and then went after him while he lay stunned on the floor. The angry 250-pound Pistons center fought off attempts to separate him from Eakins, who got up and attempted to fight back. The scuffle carried into the stands before the two combatants parted.

Eakins, not ejected, converted his free throw for the technical foul to reduce Detroit's lead to 78-63 with 6:25 left in the third quarter.

The Pistons went on to outscore Kansas City 19-15 without Lanier and rolled up 40 points to take a 97-78 lead into the final quarter en route to their seventh straight home win and 12th in the last 13.

Palatine, McKenna break Arlington's 13-year jinx

by J. ANDREW KEHE

The Palatine Pirates had a lot of evening up to do — 13 years worth since Palatine beat Arlington, 73-63 in 1964 — coming into Grace Gym Saturday night, so they turned to senior Kevin McKenna who supplied all the fireworks to propel Palatine to a 52-46 upset over Arlington.

The victory gave the Pirates a split for the weekend, a split with the Cardinals for the season and a tie for second in the North with a 4-4 record.

In an effort to thwart the Cardinals high-powered offense, the Pirates showed a 1-3-1 zone defense — the first time in Ed Molitor's eight years of coaching that he has started a game with a zone. It didn't seem to bother the Cardinals initially as they whipped the ball around the perimeter, but they were unable to hit consistently.

ARLINGTON MANAGED A 12-10 first period lead but it was evident that the Cardinal star forward Greg Kloiber was going to have a tough time going around McKenna and center Bob Cole.

Kloiber moved outside and hit two bombs from the corner to give the Cards a 16-13 lead at 5:38 mark. Frank DeSimone broke loose for a left-handed layup and Jim Zobel connected on a pair from the twilight zone to give Arlington their biggest lead, 22-16.

Enter McKenna, who started firing shots every time he got the ball, scoring 10 of his 29 points in the final four minutes of the second period. The Cardinal defense was forcing turnovers but on the other end of the court, their offense shut down and the Pirates tied the score at 25-25 at intermission.

McKenna hit a jumper off the second half tip to put the Pirates out front to stay. The Cardinal five were ice cold the entire third quarter while McKenna was hitting from 20 to 25 feet against Arlington's revived man-to-man defense.

THE CARDINALS, playing without star forward Dave Kamps, were getting into foul trouble with Kloiber and North both picking up their fourth fouls in the third period. The Pirates took a 39-33 lead into the final period.

The Cardinals fired at the outset of the fourth period with Tom North and Dan Frase getting a pair of buckets each and outscored the Pirates, 8-2. With the game tied at 41-41, it turned into a highly-emotional, pressure-packed fourth period. Doug Buenzow hit for the Pirates to make it 43-41 and the Cardinals failed five times in a row to tie it.

Bill Landeene hit a jumper from the lane for the Pirates following a highly-controversial back court violation called against the Cardinals. Chris DeSimone popped from the corner to pull Arlington within three at the 2:00 mark but McKenna quickly upped the lead to five and Chris Plazak put it out of reach with two free throws in the final minute. Arlington shot only 30 per cent in the second half compared to Palatine's 54 per cent.

"Arlington's going to a man-to-man did help us," remarked Pirate coach Molitor. "We were struggling in that first period and we needed to get the ball to McKenna. He's a tremendous kid and he knows what to do with the ball when he gets it."

Along with McKenna's 29 points, he grabbed 14 rebounds. No one else in the Pirate lineup scored more than seven points. Zobel was high for Arlington with 11 points. Kloiber was held to just nine points, but did a nice job on the boards with 12 rebounds.

Hoffman girls take 2nd in district gym action

Susan Carlson, who earned first places in three of the four events and in the all-around competition too, led York to the team title at the Hoffman Estates District girls gymnastics tournament Saturday. Hoffman Estates was second.

Carlson completed the near-sweep of events by taking top places in vaulting with a 7.65, balance beam with a 7.50, floor exercise with a 7.75, all-around with a 30.35, and second place on the uneven bars with a 7.45.

HOFFMAN ESTATES' Jackie Heuer finished second in the all-around behind Carlson with a 28.00 score. That included a fifth place on the balance beam and a third place in vaulting.

The only other first place was taken by another York girl, Lynn Stone, whose 8.1 on the uneven bars was tops. York accumulated 85.75 points to Hoffman Estates' 80.15. Elk Grove was fifth with 71.40, Conant sixth with 68.10 and Schaumburg eighth with 60.40.

In addition to Heuer, Hoffman Estates qualified Laurie O'Toole in floor exercise and Cheryl Muller on the uneven bars to compete at the state meet at Maine East Feb. 11-12. Elk Grove's Laurie Beaupre and Wendy Parker ended second and third on the beam to also qualify.

"YORK REALLY dominated its own conference (the West Suburban)," Hoffman Estates coach Mary McCormick said after the meet. "It did well here, too. But I don't think York will go much farther than we will at the state meet."

"Our conference over-all is stronger, and on another given day we could have beaten them," she said. "York does have that one big gun (Carlson), though."

"But our girls did very well," McCormick added. "All of them finished in the top 10 places in their events."

MAINE EAST won the Maine North District Tournament Thursday with taking third and fourth respectively. Donna Mancini of Maine East led the all-around competition with Prospect's Mary Beth Martensen second. Martensen also had a third on the uneven bars and a fifth in floor exercise.

Also competing at Maine North were Rolling Meadows and Sacred Heart of Mary, neither of which qualified any girls for the state meet.

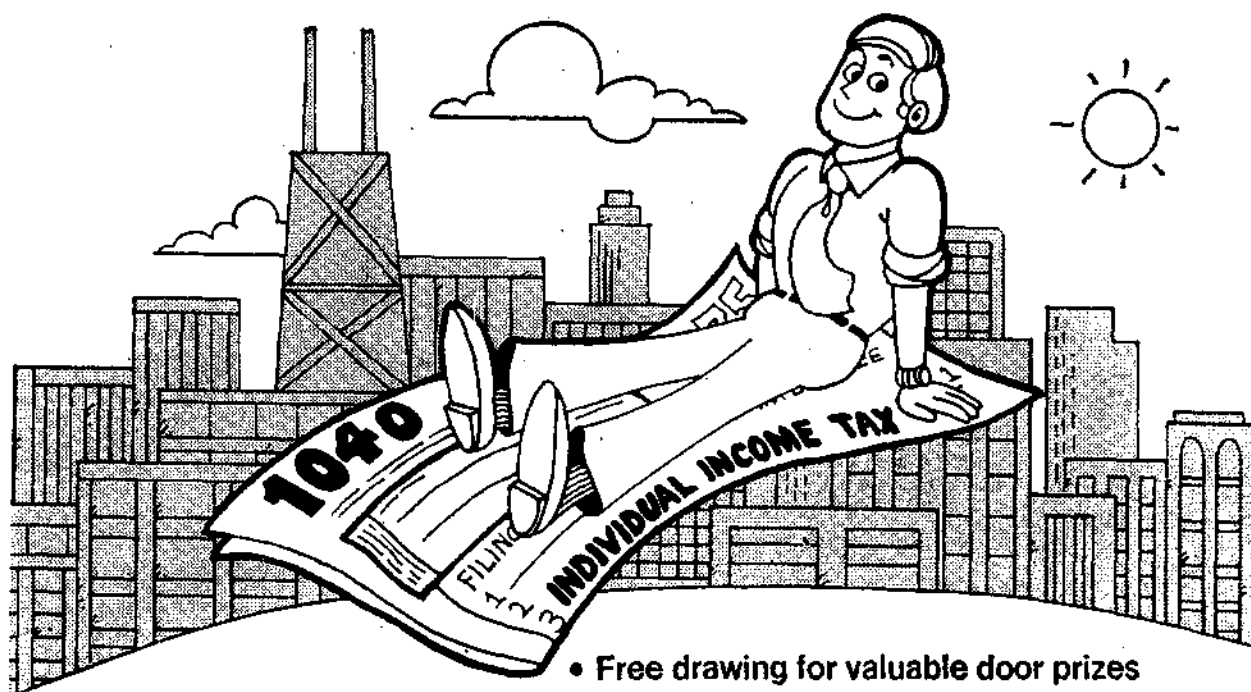

At-large qualifiers for the meet, the next 12 best competitors in individual events and the eight next best performers in the all-around from all the district tournaments, were to be selected late Sunday night.

Soap evenly attracts, repels water

Andy sends the complete Encyclopaedia Britannica's 1977 Yearbook of Science and the Future to Francine Graff, 13, of Bartlesville, Okla., for her question:

HOW DOES SOAP WORK?

Soap, until recently was the only washing agent we had. Now available also are many synthetic detergents which are actually soapless soaps.

Did you realize that nothing like soap can be found in nature? Before we learned to make soap, cleaning was done with oil, ashes, sand or pumice.

Soap was first used as a washing agent by Galen, a Greek physician from the 2nd Century A.D. Then the Italians in the 7th Century made a yellow soap from potash and animal oils. The potash was obtained from lye, an alkaline liquid made by dripping hot water through wood ashes.

During the 8th Century the Spanish made soap with olive oil replacing animal fat. The soap was called Castile, and it is still made today. During the next few centuries the French and the English also began making soap, using fats and an alkali obtained from seaweed.

Among the first to settle in America were professional soapmakers. Though commercial soap was available by the 1800s, many American housewives made their own, using the same methods from several centuries earlier.

Ask Andy

Soap molecules act in strange ways: one part of each molecule is attracted to water but repelled by dirt and grease, while the other end of the same molecule is attracted to dirt and grease but repelled by water. Part of the molecule tries to get deep into the water, while part tries to stay out. Both are evenly matched so instead of getting under the water or out of it, the soap stays right on the surface.

In doing the laundry, soap helps water get into every clothing fiber, including those beneath grease spots. It helps water get into grease by actually making the water wetter.

Soap also loosens dirt and grease fragments from whatever is being washed. The soap coats each particle with a slippery film that prevents the particles from reforming into clumps. It also floats away the particles and keeps them suspended in the water.

After its cleansing action has worked, soap must be rinsed out of the washed articles, leaving behind neither dirt nor soap. Synthetic detergents perform this last task better than soap does.

Andy sends a Student Globe to Pat Kimpler, 13, of Libertyville, for his question:

WHAT ARE DOW JONES AVERAGES?

You'll find the Dow Jones averages listed daily in the financial section of your newspaper. They tell those interested in the workings of the stock market what a cross section of 30 blue chip industrial stocks listed on the New York Stock Exchange did the previous day in the way of sales. Study of the averages can quickly tell those interested how the market as a whole reacted, and this information serves as a bell-weather for the future.

A stock is a share in a business, and a blue chip stock is one from a company that stands high in the public's confidence because of its steady record of earnings.

Do you have a question to Ask Andy? Send it on a post card with your name, age and complete address to Ask Andy, in care of The Herald, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill., 60006. Entries open to girls and boys 7 to 17.

4-bid shows good trumps

Jim: "In all systems that use the forcing two bid it is understood that the jump to four of partner's two-spade or two-heart bid shows good trump support while denying any first or second-round controls. Who thought of that bid?"

Oswald: "It was my old partner — life master number one, Dave Bruce. We were the first pair to use the bid, but others adopted it quickly."

Jim: "North really had sub-minimum values for his bid on account of his 4-3-3-3 distribution. South expected a trifle more when he bid six, but careful play brought the slam home."

Oswald: "He won the spade in his own hand, cashed the ace of diamonds and noted that West dropped the jack. Now he played two more rounds of trumps while making sure to win the last one in dummy before leading dummy's five of diamonds toward his own hand."

Jim: "South would have played his nine if East played low, but East put up the ten. South took his king, led a diamond back to dummy's eight and East's queen. This allowed him to discard a club from dummy on his fifth diamond and ruff his last club to wind up with five trumps, plus a ruff in dummy, plus four diamonds and two clubs for a total of twelve."

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The FBI investigated women's liberation groups for at least four years up to 1973 and compiled a file on the politics and sexual preferences of activist women across the nation, the Los Angeles Times reported Sunday.

The story from the Times' Washington bureau said that a 1,377-page report made public through a request under the Freedom of Information Act was censored to eliminate the names of informants and of some, but not all, of the individuals investigated.

Firemen battle flames Sunday that engulf the Goldblatt's department store in Mount Prospect.

Fire guts Goldblatt's

by DANN GIRE
and DAVE IBATA

A fire Sunday at the Mount Prospect Plaza Shopping Center destroyed a Goldblatt's department store and a bookstore.

Although official damage estimates were not available Sunday night, the loss figures are expected to be in the millions of dollars.

An adjacent ice cream parlor was heavily damaged. A jewelry store containing $100,000 in gold, diamonds and wristwatches escaped the flames but was damaged by smoke.

NO INJURIES WERE reported in the fire, which broke out at 10:50 a.m., 10 minutes before Goldblatt's was scheduled to open. Initial reports said an electrical malfunction in Goldblatt's furniture department triggered the blaze at the center, Rand and Central roads, Mount Prospect.

More than 100 firefighters from nine suburban departments battled the fire for several hours before bringing the fire under control about 2 p.m.

Within two hours, fire had razed the two-story Goldblatt's store. Firefighters directed high-pressure streams of water at all sides of the building and used snorkel units to combat the blaze from above to save the rest of the shopping center.

FIREFIGHTERS said the 16-year-old building had no sprinkler system or fire hoses because it was built before state laws requiring fire extinguishing systems were enacted.

Flames spread from Goldblatt's to the Book Corner next door, knocking down a wall and destroying the store. The 35 Flavors Ice Cream Parlor was severely damaged by heat, smoke and water.

Routine Sunday—not for Radosta

by DOUG RAY
Managing Editor

On a normal Sunday, Anthony Radosta would have been in the furniture department tagging merchandise.

This Sunday, he changed his routine. Instead of getting to work 15 minutes early, he stopped in DiCrescenzo's Italian market in the shopping center to pick up something to take home later for dinner.

So when Radosta walked around back of the Goldblatt's store and opened the door, the fire already had begun.

"I got right up to the door when two

firefighters succeeded in keeping flames from spreading to Zoll Bros. Jewelry, adjacent to the Book Corner, and saved $100,000 in jewelry.

The fire reportedly broke out in the northwest corner of the Goldblatt's store. Flames ignited furniture, displays and clothing, and by the time firefighters arrived, the roof of the building had collapsed.

One of the first to report the fire was 12-year-old Alan Hendrickson, 280 N. Westgate Rd., Mount Prospect.

or three people ran out and said the place was on fire," Radosta looked up and saw smoke piercing through the seams in the roof.

"THE STOCK BOYS were the ones who came out the door. They yelled that my furniture store was on fire. I couldn't believe it at first because the smoke looked like steam from ice melting against the cold. Then it got heavier."

He walked around the building. In minutes flames shot through the roof. Inside a mass of yellow fire pushed toward the ceiling. Before long there was nothing left untouched by fire.

About 10 employees were inside when

Alan said he was walking by the north side of Goldblatt's with five friends when he saw fire through a picture window.

UNCONFIRMED reports stated seven store employees and the store manager were inside Goldblatt's when the fire broke out. All escaped without injury.

Jeff Hodes, 17, of Niles, said he was behind Harry's Shoe Center in the plaza when he "heard something like an explosion" and ran to the front, where he saw 30-foot flames shooting up from the store.

"The whole back portion (of the building) was just in flames — flames and smoke," he said. Smoke was visible 20 miles away.

Mount Prospect Fire Chief Larry Pairitz called for assistance, and eight other departments responded. Ice and freezing temperatures hampered firefighting efforts, and hand torches were used to thaw water hydrant valves at the plaza.

the furniture department went up in smoke.

Two of them, teen-age girls, stood outside the building watching the walls crumble to the ground.

"By the time I noticed it, the flames were about as tall as I am," said one of the girls. "We were in the office, and when I saw the fire we took off for the exits."

THE FIRE ALARM was sounded and the handful who still were inside made for two back doors. "Most of the people were just coming to work and hadn't gone inside yet," she said.

Radosta — who for four years worked in the area where the fire reportedly began — said there was nothing

he knew of that could have started the fire. "Someone said the outlets exploded, but I really don't know if that's true," he said.

As soon as he realized what was happening, Radosta called his wife and then another Goldblatt's store at Belmont and Central. Chicago. Louis Goldblatt had been there a few minutes earlier as part of a tour of his stores.

After that, Radosta spent several hours watching the building go down.

"All I can do now is wait and see what happens. I've worked for the company for 16 years, you know. Maybe I'll get a transfer to another store."

Dist. 59 voters to decide fate of unit plan

by SHERYL JEDLINSKI
and PAM BIGFORD

State Schools Supt. Joseph Cronin has decided to allow Elk Grove Township voters to determine if a unit school district will be formed in their area, setting the stage for a referendum this spring.

Opposing a recommendation by Cook County Schools Supt. Richard Martwick, Cronin Friday told the superintendents of Dist. 59 and High School Dist. 214 that he would let the unit district issue be decided in a referendum.

According to state law, Martwick must call for the referendum to be held between March 13 and June 6. If passed by a majority vote, the unit district would become effective July 1. Only residents in Dist. 59 will be eligible to vote on the issue.

THE UNIT district would combine Dist. 59 schools, Elk Grove High School, Elk Grove Village, and Forest View High School, Arlington Heights, under on school board and administration. Dist. 59 is one of seven elementary districts now in the Dist. 214 area.

Dist. 214 Supt. Edward Gilbert said Cronin did not go into detail Friday about his decision, but that "he indicated that after studying the transcripts from the public hearings, in his opinion he did not have sufficient basis in terms of a detriment to Dist. 214 not to permit a referendum to be held."

Gilbert and Dist. 59 Supt. Roger W. Bardwell, each said they expect to receive Cronin's confirmation of the decision today in the mail.

Last month, after attending seven public hearings on the issue, Martwick recommended that Cronin reject the unit district proposal and not call for a referendum.

"I'm disappointed, I'll admit that," Gilbert said. He said the Dist. 214 board members and administrators will "brainstorm" about their next step at a board meeting at 8 p.m. today at the administration center, 799 W. Kensington Rd., Mount Prospect.

FORMATION OF the unit district would cost Dist. 214 nearly 27 per cent of its students and 42 per cent of its assessed valuation, requiring a readjustment of programs and transforming the district's cash surpluses into deficits, unit district opponents have said.

When asked if the board will take any action in the courts to challenge the state law allowing only residents of the proposed unit district to vote in a unit district referendum, Gilbert said, "It's a possibility."

Gilbert said that the board is not allowed to spend taxpayers' money to oppose any referendum, including one on a unit district.

OPPOSITION OF the unit district are already mobilizing their forces to get the facts out to the public before the issue comes to a vote.

"There are a lot of pieces of misinformation out and a lot of rumors and promises," said Dist. 214 board member Marilyn Quinn, who lives in Dist. 59.

"We hope the unit district can be defeated, but it will be an uphill fight," she said. "The unit district has the backing of the Elk Grove Village Assn. of Industry and Commerce, an organized group with a great deal of money to spend."

MRS. QUINN hopes to be able to enlist the support of local real estate agents in pushing to defeat the proposed unit district. The educational standards of a community affects real estate values even more than tax rates do, she said.

Unit district proponents will also be doing their share of mobilizing to get the word out to the voters. Most of the referendum planning will fall to the committee which filed the unit district petition, but the Dist. 59 Board of Education and Dist. 59 Supt. Bardwell also will have a large say in how the campaign for the proposal's passage is handled. Dist. 59 Board Pres. Judith Zanca said.

In the meantime, budget and staff planning for the 1977-78 school year has been thrown into chaos. The district will now have to work on two sets of plans: one with the two high schools and one without.

Simple is chic in D.C. these days

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Chauffeur-driven bureaucrats still abound in Washington, but President Carter's disdain for the "royal" aspects of government is making them very unchic.

If Carter's denunciations of "ostentatiousness" and "living like royalty" aren't enough to make the riders uncomfortable, they should get the message from White House press secretary Jody Powell, who plans to use his 1966 Volkswagen if he can get it running again.

Despite the President's antifrill campaign, Sen. William Proxmire estimates nearly 800 "government big shots" still are driven to and from work each day at taxpayer expense.

"I THINK PEOPLE are likely to emulate the President more than any other figure," the Wisconsin Democrat said. If Carter "doesn't take advantage of perquisites, it's much harder for other people to do it. But it will take longer than just a couple of weeks."

While Carter has eliminated home-to-work chauffeur service for White House staff, all members of his Cabinet still use it. Housing Sec. Patricia Harris is chauffeured mornings but drives home with her husband at night.

Carter did not specifically ask Cabinet members to give up chauffeurs, but he told them to beware of temptations toward pomposity.

A UPI survey showed this response so far:

- Interior Sec. Cecil Andrus closed his "private dining room" and eats in the basement cafeteria with other employees. He cut the number of "pool" cars available from seven to three and eliminated two of the six assistant secretaries.
- Housing Sec. Harris turned her dining room into a conference room and eats in the cafeteria.

- Labor Sec. Ray Marshall told aides to draft an "austerity program."

- Health, Education and Welfare Sec. Joseph Califano decided not to buy new furniture for his office and he eats in the HEW cafeteria. But his No. 2 man still has door-to-door chauffeur service.

- Treasury Sec. W. Michael Blumenthal uses a bulletproof limousine but has dropped door-to-door service for his No. 2 man.

- Budget Director Bert Lance drives his own car to work.

- Transportation Sec. Brock Adams doesn't use the military aide his predecessors had and he may ask a civilian agency to run the cafeteria and send the Coast Guard cooks "back to coast-guarding."

- Sec. of State Cyrus Vance uses the same black Chrysler sedan he had during transition days, foregoing Henry Kissinger's armor-plated Cadillac. The former undersecretary's BMW has been replaced by the new man's VW camper.

- Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell discontinued FBI bodyguard protection, freeing five agents who worked part-time for his predecessor.

- Agriculture Sec. Bob Bergland rode a commercial jet on his first official trip to Florida last week but went first class. Aides said he needed the extra space to do paperwork.

- Pentagon officials using door-to-door chauffeur service were cut from 46 to 12 during the Ford administration, and that still stands. Sec. Harold Brown is "looking into further austerity measures."

- House Speaker Thomas O'Neill, asked if he would give up his limousine, said he doesn't ride in it "as much as you think." Just that day, he said, he rode to work with another congressman instead.

Is Carter's campaign a step in the right direction?

Rep. Paul Simon, D-Ill., who often drops in unannounced on government agencies to see how they operate, thinks so.

Queen marks 25th year as monarch

WINDSOR, England (UPI)—While Poet Laureate Sir John Betjeman's "Jubilee Hymn" was sung at Albert Hall and royal photographs smiled from the front pages of every national newspaper Sunday, Queen Elizabeth II marked without pageantry or fanfare her 25th anniversary as Britain's monarch.

Her personal observance of the occasion differed from the nation's celebration because the day of her accession to the throne — Feb. 6, 1952 — was also the day her father, King George VI, died.

Feb. 6, 1977 was marked by the queen quietly at Windsor Castle in the company of her family.

THE 50-YEAR-OLD Elizabeth, with her husband Prince Philip and other members of the royal family, attended Sunday morning services at Royal Chapel in the private grounds of Royal Lodge, four miles from the castle.

Later they prepared for the first of the queen's Silver Jubilee year journeys to Commonwealth countries — a seven-week visit to Australia, New Zealand, Western Samoa, Tonga, Fiji and Papua, New Guinea.

Twenty-five years ago Princess Elizabeth and Philip were at the Treetops Hotel in Kenya observing wild animals when she received the word that her father had died of cancer.

Within a few hours a blackclad Elizabeth, now her Most Excellent Majesty Elizabeth II, was flying back to London.

SHE HAD TRAVELED for months with the black mourning outfit — with the knowledge that she at any moment might be called to London to succeed her father on the throne.

The kingdom whose reign she accepted that day was very different from the way it is today.

There was still a British Empire — sometimes called a Commonwealth,

QUEEN ELIZABETH II shakes hands with the Dean of Windsor Chapel as she and members of the royal family leave chapel following services. The queen marked without pageantry her 25th anniversary as Britain's monarch.

The Suez Canal crisis that erased the last vestiges of Empire was four years in the future. And Liberia was the only independent black state in Africa.

"No monarch has seen such changes," the Guardian newspaper said Saturday.

The national consensus today — even in an age when many question the monarchy's relevancy — is that Queen Elizabeth II has weathered those changes admirably. Some even go further and suggest that she was the glue that kept Britain together during the difficult years of the decline of the empire.

Criminal spends time with victim, not in jail

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government is spending $2 million to help evaluate a concept in which criminals instead of being sent to jail, are ordered to repay their victims through work.

Richard Velde, chief of the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, Sunday said this form of justice is a "much more positive approach to rehabilitation."

The agency said it has issued $2 million in grants to help finance a two-year evaluation of the concept in seven states — California, Colorado, Connecticut, Georgia, Maine, Massachusetts and Oregon.

THE CONCEPT has been tried in several areas with promising results, it said.

One success story involved a burglar who was caught breaking into a minister's home. He was ordered to work for the clergyman. And three years later, the minister performed a marriage ceremony for the ex-burglar and his bride.

In another case, a youth stole and wrecked a car. Instead of going to jail he was ordered to work for the insurance company to repay it for the loss. The company later hired him on a regular basis, with a promotion.

A third example involved a businessman who started drinking heavily and was caught passing bad checks. He was ordered to work for his state's corrections department. Eventually he became a regular staff member, assigned to help alcoholics.

INDICATIONS ARE, Velde said, that the concept "saves taxpayers large sums of money and helps ease overcrowding in jails and prisons."

One question the administration hopes to answer is whether offenders should make restitution directly to the victim or to the community in the form of work at a hospital or other institution.

Other questions are whether this form of rehabilitation would be lasting, what is fair restitution and should the victim have a say about it.

The amounts of the grants are: California $220,496, Colorado $250,000, Connecticut $288,000, Georgia $356,195, Maine $169,104, Massachusetts $97,435 and Oregon $215,000. The program began last October.

Boyle's prison bail hearing today

MEDIA, Pa. (UPI)—W.A. (Tony) Boyle, 74, will have a bail hearing today that may lead to his release from the jail where he was sent to serve three consecutive life terms for ordering the murder of United Mine Workers Union rival Joseph Yablonski.

Boyle's attorney, A. Charles Peruto, had asked for the bail hearing 10 days ago after the state Supreme Court ordered a retrial for Boyle.

"I see no reason why bail would be denied," Peruto said. "It was not a capital case. The death penalty not being involved, he's entitled to bail."

Boyle, who is in the state correctional institution in Pittsburgh, was not expected to attend the hearing before Delaware County Court Judge Francis Catania.

Boyle has a severe heart ailment and is still suffering from the after effects of a drug overdose before his arrest in 1973.

Richard Sprague, the former Philadelphia first assistant district attorney who served as special prosecutor in the Boyle case, was expected to attend the hearing.

Sprague, now special counsel to the House committee on assassinations, has asked the state high court to reconsider its retrial order.

Officials defend need for $5.2 million

Dist. 62 surplus excessive: teachers' union report

by DICK DALL

A $5.2 million surplus in the Des Plaines Dist. 62 education fund has been criticized as "excessive" in a report financed by the district's teachers' union.

Robert L. Monks, assistant professor at Loyola University's Dept. of Administration, said in his report that Dist. 62 is being "unrealistic" in its budget projections.

"What they've done the last five years is underestimate revenue and overestimate expenses," Monks said Friday. "They're assuming income will be constant while costs inflate."

MONKS WAS HIRED Jan. 18 by the Dist. 62 teachers' union to do the study.

Robert Birchfield, Dist. 62 Board of Education member and finance committee chairman, said although he had not seen the report he had heard of Monks' criticism and termed it a "bum rap."

In light of anticipated budget deficits, the surplus is needed to keep the district in the black, he said.

"We'll probably have our first deficit this year — about $200,000 to $300,000," Birchfield said. "Next year we project a $1.5 million deficit, and we estimate that by 1980 we'll be out of money."

THE TOTAL SURPLUS in the district is $9 million, Monks said, and recommended a tax decrease in the operations, building and maintenance fund, where the bulk of the surplus balance lies.

Monks also proposed the $5.2 million education fund surplus be reduced to about $3 million.

"The rule of thumb is that if you've got enough to tide you over for six months of salaries, you're in pretty good shape," he said. "In Dist. 62 that would be about $3 million."

The report says no personnel cuts are needed because of the education fund surplus.

DURING RECENT years, about 15 teaching positions per year have been vacated due to attrition, Monks said.

"If they're not replaced it will reduce the expenditures in the educational fund each year without touching the surplus," he said.

Birchfield said the surplus "probably is uncommon," but endorsed it as a "cushion" allowing the school to avoid "drastic cutbacks of staff or programs."

The surplus was born about six years ago, he said, during several years as a working cash fund, a type of internal bank account built up "for the school to have money to pay expenditures when taxes were delayed."

THE ALTERNATIVE, Birchfield said, was to borrow money from banks based on anticipated tax revenue.

In 1972 the district was "surprised," he said, to get tax dollars in advance of when they were due.

"In recent years we got advance taxes — revenue ahead of the rate at which we spent it — which meant we didn't have to use the working cash fund."

Union Pres. Janice Cook said the teachers' long-range planning committee and the citizens' study committee, both appointed by the board of education, to study district finances, will discuss the report's findings.

A preliminary report from both groups is due next month with a final report due in March.

"Our (teachers') general feeling is there is no crisis," she said. "When you have excessive money you don't have a crisis."

Passage of consumer law expected

The long-delayed Des Plaines consumer protection ordinance is expected to reach the council floor for passage tonight.

The final council vote on the consumer ordinance originally was scheduled for Jan. 3, but was postponed twice because of Chamber of Commerce criticism that the proposed measure excludes too many professions.

Chamber officials apparently are resigned to the probable passage of the ordinance and will make no further objections, Chamber Director C.W. Kaitschuck said.

"We've gone on record as to our feelings on the ordinance, and we don't think our objections were unreasonable," Kaitschuck said.

KAITSCHUCK SAID the Chamber supports the idea of a consumer protection agency, but believes it concentrates too heavily on retail merchants.

City Atty. Charles Hug, who drafted the ordinance, said the city couldn't legally include professionals such as doctors, lawyers and real estate agents because they are regulated by the state.

The ordinance would establish a seven-member commission in Des Plaines which would provide residents with a local group to handle consumer complaints. The commission would supplement and work closely with county, state and federal consumer agencies.

The council will give final consideration to the measure at 8 p.m. in the Des Plaines Civic Center, 1420 Miner St.

THE COMMISSION would investigate complaints of false advertising, deceptive practices, fraud, false or improper price markings and poor service and workmanship.

Hug said the primary duty of the commission would be to resolve disputes between residents and local businesses.

The proposed ordinance provides for a fine of up to $500 for anyone found violating consumer regulations.

The ordinance establishing the commission calls for a "cross-section of business and consumer interests." The ordinance requires the appointment of at least one homemaker, one representative from a local community organization and two representatives from business.

Although several professions are exempt from prosecution under the ordinance, said Alan M. Abrams, 8th, said the commission would be open to all types of local consumer complaints. "They still could refer those types of complaints," he said.

Psychiatric ward addition proposed

City to mull Forest Hospital plan

Forest Hospital's controversial plan to expand its psychiatric ward at 555 Wilson Ln., Des Plaines, will come before the city council tonight.

The plan, which will clear two city agencies, will receive a recommendation tonight from the municipal development committee that conducted a public hearing on the issue last week.

The meeting will begin at 8 p.m. in the Des Plaines Civic Center, 1420 Miner St.

The Des Plaines Dist. 62 Board of Education will debate the issue tonight and hopes to present its recommendation before the city council votes on the matter. Stuart Kisten, Dist. 62 board president, said.

THE PROPOSED four-story addition already has been approved by the city plan commission and zoning board.

Forest Hospital has requested a special-use permit from the city to allow construction of a 50-by-100-foot addition at the north end of the hospital. It would include patient rooms, consultation rooms and offices.

Hospital officials say the addition will not increase the total number of patients at the hospital.

"I don't believe that," Kisten said. "It will increase the facilities and services available on an outpatient basis. When you expand a facility, you get more activity."

KISTEN and other residents in the area say the addition would bring the hospital too close to North School, 1789 Rand Rd., which is east of the hospital.

About 165 area residents have signed a petition opposing further expansion of the psychiatric ward. Part of the opposition stems from fear of mental patients who occasionally walk away from the hospital grounds into nearby residential and school areas, Kisten said.

"Some of those people unfortunately are not stable," Kisten said. "There's always a chance one of them could wander off and harm one of the school children."

Maine students to present 'Arsenic'

Maine North High School will present Joseph Kesserling's comedy "Arsenic and Old Lace" Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Curtain time is 8 p.m. in the school's theater, 9511 Harrison St., Des Plaines.

South Stuart's Mr. Tom bound for heaven's halls

by DOROTHY OLIVER

To generations of children he was known as Mr. Tom, a small feisty Welshman who would scold you readily for not wiping your feet. And you a nickel when you forgot your milk money or sing you an Irish melody when the mood struck him.

By day he roamed the halls of South School, Cora and White streets, Des Plaines, where he was employed for the last 22 years as day custodian, and where he watched over "his children" year after year.

Thomas Kenneth Collins, 58, was an institution at South School. Now he is gone.

TOM COLLINS collapsed in his home early Friday, apparently of a heart attack, and was pronounced dead at Holy Family Hospital in Des Plaines. He leaves his wife Mabel, three sons and hundreds of friends, old and young.

Born in Wales, Collins as a young man worked in the coal mines and later served in World War II. He emigrated to the United States after the war, staying first with relatives in Grand Rapids, Mich., before coming to this area. Soon after he arrived he sent for a young girl from Northern Ireland he had met. He and Mabel were married in their new homeland. They reared three children here, Frank, 19, Edward, 16, and Trevor, 14.

He was proud of his heritage and stayed close with people from the British Isles through the Gaelic American Club, which met at Durty Dick's Pub at Grand and Austin in Chicago. To the Gaelic Americans he was known as "T.K.," and as president of the club he led many a sing-a-long and organized annual trips to the old country.

Collins joined the Des Plaines Dist. 62 school system 24 years ago. In his 22 years at South School he met hundreds of children and prided himself on knowing each of them by name.

HE TOOK SPECIAL delight in music and every so often, after school was out for the day, he would take a few minutes to sing to children who congregated in the music room, begging for a song.

Last October, Tom was unloading luggage from a car when he was hit from behind by another car. He was hospitalized at Holy Family for several months, coming home shortly before Christmas. For the last three months he had been undergoing physical therapy to regain the use of his legs.

Mrs. David Jones, a close friend of the Collins family, said Collins was looking forward to returning to work and "his children." He was just beginning to walk without the aid of crutches.

The children never forgot Mr. Tom. There were periodic batches of letters and drawings sent to the hospital or his home to wish him well.

A final tribute will be paid to Tom Collins at 8 p.m. Wednesday at a memorial service at the First Methodist Church of Park Ridge, 418 Touhy Ave.

Fire guts Goldblatt's

by DANN GIRE

A fire Sunday at the Mount Prospect Plaza Shopping Center destroyed a Goldblatt's department store and a bookstore.

Although official damage estimates were not available Sunday night, the loss figures are expected to be in the millions of dollars.

An adjacent ice cream parlor was heavily damaged. A jewelry store containing $100,000 in gold, diamonds and wristwatches escaped the flames but was damaged by smoke.

NO INJURIES WERE reported in the fire, which broke out at 10:50 a.m., 10 minutes before Goldblatt's was scheduled to open. Initial reports said an electrical malfunction in Goldblatt's furniture department triggered the blaze at the center, Rand and Central roads, Mount Prospect.

More than 100 firefighters from nine suburban departments battled the flames for several hours before bringing the fire under control about 2 p.m.

Within two hours, fire had razed the two-story Goldblatt's store. Firefighters directed high-pressure streams of water at all sides of the building and used snorkel units to combat the blaze from above to save the rest of the shopping center.

FIREFIGHTERS said the 16-year-old building had no sprinkler system or fire hoses because it was built before state laws requiring fire extinguishing systems were enacted.

Flames spread from Goldblatt's to the Book Corner next door, knocking down a wall and destroying the store. The 35 Flavors Ice Cream Parlor was severely damaged by heat, smoke and water.

Firefighters succeeded in keeping flames from spreading to Zoll Bros. Jewelry, adjacent to the Book Corner, and saved $100,000 in jewelry.

The fire reportedly broke out in the northwest corner of the Goldblatt's store. Flames ignited furniture, displays and clothing, and by the time firefighters arrived, the roof of the building had collapsed.

One of the first to report the fire was 12-year-old Alan Hendrickson, 280 N. Westgate Rd., Mount Prospect.

Alan said he was walking by the north side of Goldblatt's with five friends when he saw fire through a picture window.

UNCONFIRMED reports stated seven store employees and the store manager were inside Goldblatt's when the fire broke out. All escaped without injury.

Jeff Hodes, 17, of Niles, said he was behind Harry's Shoe Center in the plaza when he "heard something like an explosion" and ran to the front, where he saw 30-foot flames shooting up from the store.

"The whole back portion (of the building) was just in flames — flames and smoke," he said. Smoke was visible 20 miles away.

Mount Prospect Fire Chief Larry Pairitz called for assistance, and eight other departments responded. Ice and freezing temperatures hampered firefighting efforts, and hand torches were used to thaw water hydrant valves at the plaza.

Routine Sunday—not for Radosta

by DOUG RAY
Managing Editor

On a normal Sunday, Anthony Radosta would have been in the furniture department tagging merchandise.

This Sunday, he changed his routine. Instead of getting to work 15 minutes early, he stopped in DiCrescenzo's Italian market in the shopping center to pick up something to take home later for dinner.

So when Radosta walked around back of the Goldblatt's store and opened the door, the fire already had begun.

"I got right up to the door when two or three people ran out and said the place was on fire," Radosta looked up and saw smoke piercing through the seams in the roof.

"THE STOCK BOYS were the ones who came out the door. They yelled that my furniture store was on fire. I couldn't believe it at first because the smoke looked like steam from ice melting against the cold. Then it got heavier."

He walked around the building. In minutes flames shot through the roof. Inside a mass of yellow fire pushed toward the ceiling. Before long there was nothing left untouched by fire.

About 10 employees were inside when the furniture department went up in smoke.

Two of them, teen-age girls, stood outside the building watching the walls crumble to the ground.

"By the time I noticed it, the flames were about as tall as I am," said one of the girls. "We were in the office, and when I saw the fire we took off for the exits."

THE FIRE ALARM was sounded and the handful who still were inside made for two back doors. "Most of the people were just coming to work and hadn't gone inside yet," she said.

Radosta — who for four years worked in the area where the fire reportedly began — said there was nothing

he knew of that could have started the fire. "Someone said the outlets exploded, but I really don't know if that's true," he said.

As soon as he realized what was happening, Radosta called his wife and then another Goldblatt's store at Belmont and Central, Chicago. Louis Goldblatt had been there a few minutes earlier as part of a tour of his stores.

After that, Radosta spent several hours watching the building go down.

"All I can do now is wait and see what happens. I've worked for the company for 16 years, you know. Maybe I'll get a transfer to another store."

Dist. 59 voters to decide fate of unit plan

by SHERYL JEDLINSKI
and PAM BIGFORD

State Schools Supt. Joseph Cronin has decided to allow Elk Grove Township voters to determine if a unit school district will be formed in their area, setting the stage for a referendum this spring.

Opposing a recommendation by Cook County Schools Supt. Richard Martwick, Cronin Friday told the superintendents of Dist. 59 and High School Dist. 214 that he would let the unit district issue be decided in a referendum.

According to state law, Martwick must call for the referendum to be held between March 18 and June 6. If passed by a majority vote, the unit district would become effective July 1. Only residents in Dist. 59 will be eligible to vote on the issue.

THE UNIT district would combine Dist. 59 schools, Elk Grove High School, Elk Grove Village, and Forest View High School, Arlington Heights, under on school board and administration. Dist. 59 is one of seven elementary districts now in the Dist. 214 area.

Dist. 214 Supt. Edward Gilbert said Cronin did not go into detail Friday about his decision, but that "he indicated that after studying the transcripts from the public hearings, in his opinion he did not have sufficient basis in terms of a detriment to Dist. 214 not to permit a referendum to be held."

Gilbert and Dist. 59 Supt. Roger W. Bardwell, each said they expect to receive Cronin's confirmation of the decision today in the mail.

Last month, after attending seven public hearings on the issue, Martwick recommended that Cronin reject the unit district proposal and not call for a referendum.

"I'm disappointed, I'll admit that," Gilbert said. He said the Dist. 214 board members and administrators will "brainstorm" about their next step at a board meeting at 8 p.m. today at the administration center, 799 W. Kensington Rd., Mount Prospect.

FORMATION of the unit district would cost Dist. 214 nearly 27 per cent of its students and 42 per cent of its assessed valuation, requiring a readjustment of programs and transforming the district's cash surpluses into deficits, unit district opponents have said.

When asked if the board will take any action in the courts to challenge the state law allowing only residents of the proposed unit district to vote in a unit district referendum, Gilbert said, "It's a possibility."

Gilbert said that the board is not allowed to spend taxpayers' money to oppose any referendum, including one on a unit district.

OPponents of the unit district are already mobilizing their forces to get the facts out to the public before the issue comes to a vote.

"There are a lot of pieces of misinformation out and a lot of rumors and promises," said Dist. 214 board member Marilyn Quinn, who lives in Dist. 59.

"We hope the unit district can be defeated, but it will be an uphill fight," she said. "The unit district has the backing of the Elk Grove Village Assn. of Industry and Commerce, an organized group with a great deal of money to spend."

MRS. QUINN hopes to be able to enlist the support of local real estate agents in pushing to defeat the proposed unit district. The educational standards of a community affects real estate values even more than tax rates do, she said.

Unit district proponents will also be doing their share of mobilizing to get the word out to the voters. Most of the referendum planning will fall to the committee which filed the unit district petition, but the Dist. 59 Board of Education and Dist. 59 Supt. Bardwell also will have a large say in how the campaign for the proposal's passage is handled, Dist. 59 Board Pres. Judith Zanca said.

In the meantime, budget and staff planning for the 1977-78 school year has been thrown into chaos. The district will now have to work on two sets of plans: one with the two high schools and one without.

Suburban digest

Salt supplies come for two villages

Although several Northwest suburbs have shortages of salt, Mount Prospect and Wheeling are replenishing their supplies. The Mount Prospect Public Works Dept. Friday received a 100-ton shipment from a Chicago firm. David Creamer, public works director, said the supply is good for about three more saltings. Despite the fresh shipment, however, Creamer said the village's supplier said "this could be the end." In Wheeling, the village will receive a special shipment today from Racine, Wis. The village's supplier, Diamond Salt Co., has "an excess of salt," Larry Oppenheimer, village public works director, said. "We'll be getting about 14 tons — enough for one more go-round. After two more days of snow we'll probably be out of everything," he said.

Police meeting on union issue

Palatine patrolmen blocked in their efforts to have Teamsters Local 714 represent them in contract talks with the village will meet Tuesday to map new strategy in obtaining union recognition. Thirty-three village patrolmen — 90 per cent of the force — have joined the local, but village officials refuse to recognize the union. A union official said he will suggest at the meeting nothing that could threaten the patrolmen's jobs, such as a strike or ticket slowdown.

Week to end near 40 degrees

Bye arctic blues, heat's on way

A heat wave is converging on Chicago, with temperatures near 40 by the end of the week, the National Weather Service in Chicago has predicted.

Temperatures will rise from a high in the upper teens today to a high in the upper 20s Tuesday and a balmy high in the upper 30s by Thursday. Lows will dip to between 10 and 15 degrees tonight, but will hover in the 20s by Thursday night.

A spokesman for the weather service said the flow of air is shifting away from the arctic northwest toward the southwest, bringing a warming trend that should last through the week. A chance of snow, however, also is forecast for Thursday.

TEMPERATURES Thursday actually may rise above the average temperature for Feb. 10, which in the past has recorded a high of 34 and a low of 19, the spokesman said.

Warmer temperatures follow a frigid blast out of the north that passed through the Chicago area during the weekend, sending temperatures plunging to 5 below at Midway Airport early Sunday morning.

The cold wave continued across the nation Sunday threatening a frost in northern Florida, and sending the mercury plunging from New York to the Southeast. Added pressure struck, dwindling heating fuel supplies.

Snow added to the misery of New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Michigan residents. Nine counties in western and northern New York were assured of federal disaster aid. State officials estimated it may take nine days to restore order to the region.

tinue until after his death in May 1972, the Times said.

A REPORT FROM the New York office said that at a Women's Liberation Movement meeting in 1970 a notice was posted recommending that women use actor Paul Newman's credit card number when dialing long distance.

The report did not say whether Newman authorized use of his credit card or whether the women regarded him as a male chauvinist target.

Another meeting decided not to let Bella Abzug, then a candidate for Congress in New York, use the center's mailing list as it would enable her to "promote her politics."

The Washington, Chicago and San Francisco offices of the FBI protested

to Hoover that there were not sufficient national security grounds to conduct the investigation but Hoover overruled them.

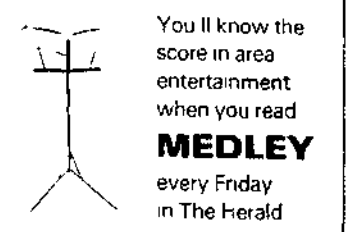

It is absolutely essential that we conduct sufficient investigation to clearly establish subversive ramifications of the WLM and to determine the potential for violence presented by the various groups connected with this movement as well as any possible threat they may represent to the internal security of the United States, Hoover wrote.

SOME REPORTS made unflattering references to the appearance of militant women and contained suggestions the movement was dominated by lesbians.

A report from a Seattle informant said

The women in general appeared to be hippies, lesbians or from other far-out groups. Many of them were very colorfully dressed but the majority wore faded blue jeans. Most seemed to be making a real attempt to be unattractive.

The Times said the documents did not indicate what use the FBI made of the information.

Search for 2 protestors halted on Hawaiian island

HONOLULU (UPI) — The Navy has abandoned its search for two protestors on a remote Hawaiian island used for military bombing practice, but authorities said Sunday they will keep the area under surveillance.

The two men had been among a group of five who made an unauthorized landing on the restricted island a week ago.

A Navy spokesman said the search party of more than 40 marines, civilian police and naval ordnance disposal specialists was airlifted out by helicopter late Saturday from the tiny, uninhabited island off the coast of Maui.

The searchers had spent a week

looking for the protestors.

Three of the protestors were removed by Pearl Harbor civilian police several days after they landed, but the two others, identified as Walter Rittie Jr. and Richard Sawyer, remained at large.

Lt Cmdr Scotty Stone said further searches "will be made as the situation develops." The Coast Guard will conduct surveillance of the island and surrounding restricted waters, he said.

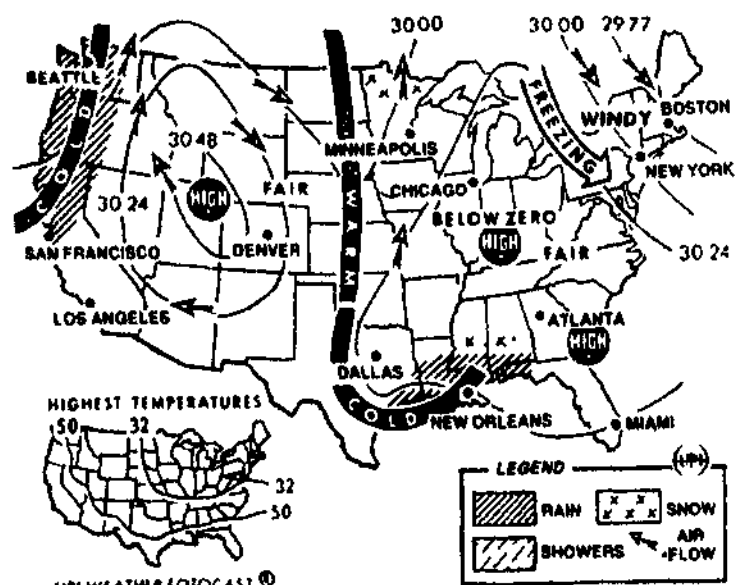

The Navy has maintained that U.S. military readiness would be diminished if training forces are halted from using Kahoolawe for bombardment and training practice.

Then concern has grown during the past few years because of growing demands by individuals and some top Hawaiian political leaders that the bombing be stopped and the island returned to the state for conservation purposes.

WHEELING POLICE radio operator Dieter Lenz was the first civilian hired by the department to be a dispatcher. The 27-year-old Dieter was disabled in Vietnam. He has been on the job three years. Police officials say they would like to hire more veterans.

Disabled vet proves himself at job

by LINDA PUNCH

Dieter Lenz knows the frustration of being an unemployed disabled veteran.

Before joining the Wheeling Police Dept. as a radio dispatcher three years ago, Lenz spent several years in search of a permanent job. The 27-year-old former Marine, who lost both legs during a mine explosion in Vietnam, recalls the repeated disappointments.

"I spent close to two years looking for my first job. It was always 'we'll call you.' It got depressing," he said.

LENZ, A WAUKEGAN resident, heard about the job with the Wheeling police through a friend on the Lake Forest Police Dept. His earlier jobs with an electrical supply company and an oil additive company had fallen through, and he was tiring from the work as a mail sorter with the U.S. Postal Service.

"There's really not that much walking required with this job. I have no problems with it," he said.

As radio dispatcher, Lenz must monitor all emergency radios, answer phone calls, listen to public complaints and still remain in touch with patrolling squad cars.

"On some days it gets a little frustrating. You have the phone on one ear and you're trying to pick out some guy's voice on the radio with the other. You just have to get used to things like that," he said.

For the policeman on patrol, Lenz is often the only contact in case of unexpected trouble. Lenz said he has learned to know each man's voice and "how they react in certain situations."

"As you go along, you learn how each man operates. Whenever there's a family disturbance or suspicious circumstances on a midnight shift, I always send a backup car," he said.

DESPITE RADIO contact, however, the men in the squad cars are "really on their own," Lenz said.

"If they come on something, they have to wait for the closest car if there's any kind of trouble," he said.

Lenz also copes with legal questions from citizens, phone complaints and "people" who call at 4 a.m. just to talk.

"We have one woman who calls in to tell us her problems. It's the hardest thing. It gets on your nerves with so many other things going on, but you just have to take it all in stride," he said.

WHEELING POLICE Chief M.O. Horcher said Lenz' success as a radio dispatcher has opened the way for other disabled veterans. He said the department will be hiring additional civilian dispatchers and that he would like a handicapped person to be among the group.

Cook County is subsidizing a program run by the Mount Prospect Fire Dept. which trains disabled war veterans, like Lenz, to be radio dispatchers. Upon completing the 20-week training course, the men will be placed in dispatching jobs throughout the Northwest suburbs at hospitals, police and fire departments and other communication centers where help is needed.

"Dieter is an example of how a person can accomplish things on his own," Horcher said. "He came in and did a job quite well. It's more than operating radio equipment. You have to have a real good personality to deal with people."

Village not licked, salt on the way

Wheeling's dwindling salt supply will be replenished today with a special shipment from Racine, Wis.

Larry Oppenheimer, Wheeling public works director, Friday said the village has been notified it will receive at least two more truckloads of salt. He said the village's supplier, Diamond Salt Co., as "an excess of salt" in its Wisconsin stockpile.

"We'll be getting about 44 tons — enough for one more go round. We were trying to get four or five loads and they said they'll try to get us more by Tuesday or Wednesday," he said.

Oppenheimer said the village no longer has "salt as such. It's all mixed in with cinder chips."

"AFTER TWO more days of snow, we'll probably be out of everything," he said.

Public works crews have been instructed to salt only at intersections and stop signs because of the salt shortage, Oppenheimer said. He said the salt and cinder mixture melts the snow and ice only when the skies are sunny.

"There's going to be a lot more hazards on the streets than if we had all the salt we wanted. Everybody is going to have to keep that in mind," he said.

Wheeling Police Chief M. O. Horcher said traffic problems are about normal for snowy conditions despite the salt shortage.

"We're not finding any problems. People seem to be driving relative to what the conditions are," he said.

Other Northwest suburban communities also are reporting that salt supplies are seriously low, including Des Plaines, Palatine, Rolling Meadows, Elk Grove, Township and Cook County. Public works officials in those communities said they're resorting to emergency tactics to conserve the supplies.

Officials blame the low supplies on frozen Midwest rivers that have stalled several barges carrying salt.

Village joins bid for boys' club

An attempt to revive interest among area residents in the Countryside Boys' Club is being made by Buffalo Grove trustees, Norman Katz, club president says.

In January, Katz said he was disbanding the club because of a lack of citizen involvement. "No one wants to cooperate, no one wants to do anything for us," he said.

"It's not so terribly important that the trustees come forward, it's the citizens that have to come forward," Katz said of attempts to keep the club alive.

RUSTEE JOHN Marienthal said he will ask the village board to hold a meeting with the Buffalo Grove Jaycees Feb. 23 to arouse citizen interest in the club.

"I really think there is a need for a boys' club and it will service more than just the boys," Marienthal said.

People have told him they want the club to become a reality, Marienthal said, and he believes there is enough interest to revive it.

"You have to have some place in this village for the children to call their own. I want it to be more than just a place to play pinball," he said, referring to a proposal to open a pinball center in the village.

THE BOYS' club was an outgrowth of a 1975 special citizens' committee which the village board appointed to start a youth center.

About 20 persons worked on plans for the club at one point, Katz said, and a commitment had been secured for use of a model apartment building at the Cambridge on the Lake subdivision on Dundee Road.

Katz also consulted the Boys Club of America and planned to hire a full-time director for a club center that would serve youngsters ages 8 to 18 in Prairie View, Long Grove, Palatine, Wheeling and Arlington Heights as well as Buffalo Grove.

Money was raised to move the building from Cambridge to a site behind the village hall, but Katz decided in January to notify the village he was dropping the club idea for lack of interest.

"We could get all the money in the world but if we don't get the people what good is it?" Katz said.

"Everyone keeps telling me that there are people interested, but where are they, is the problem," he said.

Wilson resigns from park board

Wheeling Park Board Pres. Hugh Wilson has resigned from the board, saying he has moved outside park district boundaries.

Wilson's resignation leaves the board with two vacancies, one of which will be filled in the April park board election.

Wheeling Park Supt. David Phillips said the remaining two years of Wilson's term will have to be filled by appointment because filing for the election closed Jan. 24. Park commissioners are elected for six-year terms.

"It's unfortunate that it happened at this time. If we had known earlier, we would have attempted to have the vacancy created so people could have filled for the position," Phillips said.

In his letter of resignation, Wilson said the "four years I have spent on the board have been the most rewarding and will be deeply missed by me. I cannot begin to tell you the sorrow this causes me," he said.

Wilson urged the park board to appoint a commissioner to fill his unexpired term. He said he will follow "with great interest, in the park district's future acquisitions that are now in progress and wishing I could still be a part of it."

Wilson was elected to the park board in April 1973 as a write-in candidate. He defeated incumbent Alf Wilson for the position.

Firemen battle flames Sunday that engulf the Goldblatt's department store in Mount Prospect.

Fire guts Goldblatt's

by DANN GIRE
and DAVE IBATA

A fire Sunday at the Mount Prospect Plaza Shopping Center destroyed a Goldblatt's department store and a bookstore.

Although official damage estimates were not available Sunday night, the loss figures are expected to be in the millions of dollars.

An adjacent ice cream parlor was heavily damaged. A jewelry store containing $100,000 in gold, diamonds and wristwatches escaped the flames but was damaged by smoke.

NO INJURIES WERE reported in the fire, which broke out at 10:50 a.m., 10 minutes before Goldblatt's was scheduled to open. Initial reports said an electrical malfunction in Goldblatt's furniture department triggered the blaze at the center, Rand and Central roads, Mount Prospect.

More than 100 firefighters from nine suburban departments battled the flames for several hours before bringing the fire under control about 2 p.m. Within two hours, fire had razed the two-story Goldblatt's store. Firefighters directed high-pressure streams of water at all sides of the building and used snorkel units to combat the blaze from above to save the rest of the shopping center.

FIREFIGHTERS said the 16-year-old building had no sprinkler system or fire hoses because it was built before state laws requiring fire extinguishing systems were enacted.

Flames spread from Goldblatt's to the Book Corner next door, knocking down a wall and destroying the store. The 35 Flavors Ice Cream Parlor was severely damaged by heat, smoke and water.

by DOUG RAY
Managing Editor

On a normal Sunday, Anthony Radosta would have been in the furniture department tagging merchandise.

This Sunday, he changed his routine. Instead of getting to work 15 minutes early, he stopped in DiCrescenzo's Italian market in the shopping center to pick up something to take home later for dinner.

So when Radosta walked around back of the Goldblatt's store and opened the door, the fire already had begun.

"I got right up to the door when two

firefighters succeeded in keeping flames from spreading to Zoll Bros. Jewelry, adjacent to the Book Corner, and saved $100,000 in jewelry.

The fire reportedly broke out in the northwest corner of the Goldblatt's store. Flames ignited furniture, displays and clothing, and by the time firefighters arrived, the roof of the building had collapsed.

One of the first to report the fire was 12-year-old Alan Hendrickson, 280 N. Westgate Rd., Mount Prospect.

or three people ran out and said the place was on fire," Radosta looked up and saw smoke piercing through the seams in the roof.

"THE STOCK BOYS were the ones who came out the door. They yelled that my furniture store was on fire. I couldn't believe it at first because the smoke looked like steam from ice melting against the cold. Then it got heavier."

He walked around the building. In minutes flames shot through the roof. Inside a mass of yellow fire pushed toward the ceiling. Before long there was nothing left untouched by fire.

About 10 employees were inside when

Alan said he was walking by the north side of Goldblatt's with five friends when he saw fire through a picture window.

UNCONFIRMED reports stated seven store employees and the store manager were inside Goldblatt's when the fire broke out. All escaped without injury.

Jeff Hodes, 17, of Niles, said he was behind Harry's Shoe Center in the plaza when he "heard something like an explosion" and ran to the front, where he saw 30-foot flames shooting up from the store.

"The whole back portion (of the building) was just in flames — flames and smoke," he said. Smoke was visible 20 miles away.

Mount Prospect Fire Chief Larry Pairitz called for assistance, and eight other departments responded. Ice and freezing temperatures hampered fire-fighting efforts, and hand torches were used to thaw water hydrant valves at the plaza.

Routine Sunday—not for Radosta

the furniture department went up in smoke.

Two of them, teen-age girls, stood outside the building watching the walls crumble to the ground.

"By the time I noticed it, the flames were about as tall as I am," said one of the girls. "We were in the office, and when I saw the fire we took off for the exits."

THE FIRE ALARM was sounded and the handful who still were inside made for two back doors. "Most of the people were just coming to work and hadn't gone inside yet," she said.

Radosta — who for four years worked in the area where the fire reportedly began — said there was nothing

he knew of that could have started the fire. "Someone said the outlets exploded, but I really don't know if that's true," he said.

As soon as he realized what was happening, Radosta called his wife and then another Goldblatt's store at Belmont and Central, Chicago. Louis Goldblatt had been there a few minutes earlier as part of a tour of his stores.

After that, Radosta spent several hours watching the building go down.

"All I can do now is wait and see what happens. I've worked for the company for 16 years, you know. Maybe I'll get a transfer to another store."

Dist. 59 voters to decide fate of unit plan

by SHERYL JEDLINSKI
and PAM BIGFORD

State Schools Supt. Joseph Cronin has decided to allow Elk Grove Township voters to determine if a unit school district will be formed in their area, setting the stage for a referendum this spring.

Opposing a recommendation by Cook County Schools Supt. Richard Martwick, Cronin Friday told the superintendents of Dist. 59 and High School Dist. 214 that he would let the unit district issue be decided in a referendum.

According to state law, Martwick must call for the referendum to be held between March 18 and June 6. If passed by a majority vote, the unit district would become effective July 1. Only residents in Dist. 59 will be eligible to vote on the issue.

THE UNIT district would combine Dist. 59 schools, Elk Grove High School, Elk Grove Village, and Forest View High School, Arlington Heights, under on school board and administration. Dist. 59 is one of seven elementary districts now in the Dist. 214 area.

Dist. 214 Supt. Edward Gilbert said Cronin did not go into detail Friday about his decision, but that "he indicated that after studying the transcripts from the public hearings, in his opinion he did not have sufficient basis in terms of a detriment to Dist. 214 not to permit a referendum to be held."

Gilbert and Dist. 59 Supt. Roger W. Bardwell, each said they expect to receive Cronin's confirmation of the decision today in the mail.

Last month, after attending seven public hearings on the issue, Martwick recommended that Cronin reject the unit district proposal and not call for a referendum.

"I'm disappointed, I'll admit that," Gilbert said. He said the Dist. 214 board members and administrators will "brainstorm" about their next step at a board meeting at 8 p.m. today at the administration center, 799 W. Kensington Rd., Mount Prospect.

FORMATION OF the unit district would cost Dist. 214 nearly 27 per cent of its students and 42 per cent of its assessed valuation, requiring a readjustment of programs and transforming the district's cash surpluses into deficits, unit district opponents have said.

When asked if the board will take any action in the courts to challenge the state law allowing only residents of the proposed unit district to vote in a unit district referendum, Gilbert said, "It's a possibility."

Gilbert said that the board is not allowed to spend taxpayers' money to oppose any referendum, including one on a unit district.

OPPOSERS OF the unit district are already mobilizing their forces to get the facts out to the public before the issue comes to a vote.

"There are a lot of pieces of misinformation out and a lot of rumors and promises," said Dist. 214 board member Marilyn Quinn, who lives in Dist. 59.

"We hope the unit district can be defeated, but it will be an uphill fight," she said. "The unit district has the backing of the Elk Grove Village Assn. of Industry and Commerce, an organized group with a great deal of money to spend."

MRS. QUINN hopes to be able to enlist the support of local real estate agents in pushing to defeat the proposed unit district. The educational standards of a community affects real estate values even more than tax rates do, she said.

Unit district proponents will also be doing their share of mobilizing to get the word out to the voters. Most of the referendum planning will fall to the committee which filed the unit district petition, but the Dist. 59 Board of Education and Dist. 59 Supt. Bardwell also will have a large say in how the campaign for the proposal's passage is handled. Dist. 59 Board Pres. Judith Zanca said.

In the meantime, budget and staff planning for the 1977-78 school year has been thrown into chaos. The district will now have to work on two sets of plans: one with the two high schools and one without.

While winter's arctic blast stopped much of the Midwest by closing factories and schools, it barely put a damper on attendance at one school.

Shortages of natural gas and breakdowns of mechanical fuel lines plagued public schools in Ohio last week but were not given a second thought by students at Brown School in Applecreek, Ohio.

Brown School, an Amish facility, heats with coal, carried in by students and for the pupils in Pam Hostetler's one-room school, it was "lessons as usual."

Mrs. Hostetler reported only four students of her regular 25 missed class. They couldn't make it through the snowdrifts.

Firemen battle flames Sunday that engulf the Goldblatt's department store in Mount Prospect.

by DANN GIRE

A fire Sunday at the Mount Prospect Plaza Shopping Center destroyed a Goldblatt's department store and a bookstore.

Although official damage estimates were not available Sunday night, the loss figures are expected to be in the millions of dollars.

An adjacent ice cream parlor was heavily damaged. A jewelry store containing $100,000 in gold, diamonds and wristwatches escaped the flames but was damaged by smoke.

NO INJURIES WERE reported in the fire, which broke out at 10:50 a.m., 10 minutes before Goldblatt's was scheduled to open. Initial reports said an electrical malfunction in Goldblatt's furniture department triggered the blaze at the center, Rand and Central roads, Mount Prospect.

More than 100 firefighters from nine suburban departments battled the flames for several hours before bringing the fire under control about 2 p.m.

Within two hours, fire had razed the two-story Goldblatt's store. Firefighters directed high-pressure streams of water at all sides of the building and used snorkel units to combat the blaze from above to save the rest of the shopping center.

FIREFIGHTERS said the 16-year-old building had no sprinkler system or fire hoses because it was built before state laws requiring fire extinguishing systems were enacted.

Flames spread from Goldblatt's to the Book Corner next door, knocking down a wall and destroying the store. The 35 Flavors Ice Cream Parlor was severely damaged by heat, smoke and water.

Firefighters succeeded in keeping flames from spreading to Zoll Bros. Jewelry, adjacent to the Book Corner, and saved $100,000 in jewelry.

The fire reportedly broke out in the northwest corner of the Goldblatt's store. Flames ignited furniture, displays and clothing, and by the time firefighters arrived, the roof of the building had collapsed.

One of the first to report the fire was 12-year-old Alan Hendrickson, 280 N. Westgate Rd., Mount Prospect.

Alan said he was walking by the north side of Goldblatt's with five friends when he saw fire through a picture window.

UNCONFIRMED reports stated seven store employees and the store manager were inside Goldblatt's when the fire broke out. All escaped without injury.

Jeff Hodes, 17, of Niles, said he was behind Harry's Shoe Center in the plaza when he "heard something like an explosion" and ran to the front, where he saw 30-foot flames shooting up from the store.

"The whole back portion (of the building) was just in flames — flames and smoke," he said. Smoke was visible 20 miles away.

Mount Prospect Fire Chief Larry Paintz called for assistance, and eight other departments responded. Ice and freezing temperatures hampered firefighting efforts, and hand torches were used to thaw water hydrant valves at the plaza.

Routine Sunday—not for Radosta

by DOUG RAY
Managing Editor

On a normal Sunday, Anthony Radosta would have been in the furniture department tagging merchandise.

This Sunday, he changed his routine. Instead of getting to work 15 minutes early, he stopped in DiCrescenzo's Italian market in the shopping center to pick up something to take home later for dinner.

So when Radosta walked around back of the Goldblatt's store and opened the door, the fire already had begun.

"I got right up to the door when two or three people ran out and said the place was on fire," Radosta looked up and saw smoke piercing through the seams in the roof.

"THE STOCK BOYS were the ones who came out the door. They yelled that my furniture store was on fire. I couldn't believe it at first because the smoke looked like steam from ice melting against the cold. Then it got heavier."

He walked around the building. In minutes flames shot through the roof. Inside a mass of yellow fire pushed toward the ceiling. Before long there was nothing left untouched by fire.

About 10 employees were inside when the furniture department went up in smoke.

Two of them, teen-age girls, stood outside the building watching the walls crumble to the ground.

"By the time I noticed it, the flames were about as tall as I am," said one of the girls. "We were in the office, and when I saw the fire we took off for the exits."

THE FIRE ALARM was sounded and the handful who still were inside made for two back doors. "Most of the people were just coming to work and hadn't gone inside yet," she said.

Radosta — who for four years worked in the area where the fire reportedly began — said there was nothing

he knew of that could have started the fire. "Someone said the outlets exploded, but I really don't know if that's true," he said.

As soon as he realized what was happening, Radosta called his wife and then another Goldblatt's store at Belmont and Central, Chicago. Louis Goldblatt had been there a few minutes earlier as part of a tour of his stores.

After that, Radosta spent several hours watching the building go down.

"All I can do now is wait and see what happens. I've worked for the company for 16 years, you know. Maybe I'll get a transfer to another store."

Dist. 59 voters to decide fate of unit plan

by SHERYL JEDLINSKI
and PAM BIGFORD

State Schools Supt. Joseph Cronin has decided to allow Elk Grove Township voters to determine if a unit school district will be formed in their area, setting the stage for a referendum this spring.

Opposing a recommendation by Cook County Schools Supt. Richard Martwick, Cronin Friday told the superintendents of Dist. 59 and High School Dist. 214 that he would let the unit district issue be decided in a referendum.

According to state law, Martwick must call for the referendum to be held between March 18 and June 6. If passed by a majority vote, the unit district would become effective July 1. Only residents in Dist. 59 will be eligible to vote on the issue.

THE UNIT district would combine Dist. 59 schools, Elk Grove High School, Elk Grove Village, and Forest View High School, Arlington Heights, under on school board and administration. Dist. 59 is one of seven elementary districts now in the Dist. 214 area.

Dist. 214 Supt. Edward Gilbert said Cronin did not go into detail Friday about his decision, but that "he indicated that after studying the transcripts from the public hearings, in his opinion he did not have sufficient basis in terms of a detriment to Dist. 214 not to permit a referendum to be held."

Gilbert and Dist. 59 Supt. Roger W. Bardwell, each said they expect to receive Cronin's confirmation of the decision today in the mail.

Last month, after attending seven public hearings on the issue, Martwick recommended that Cronin reject the unit district proposal and not call for a referendum.

"I'm disappointed, I'll admit that," Gilbert said. He said the Dist. 214 board members and administrators will "brainstorm" about their next step at a board meeting at 8 p.m. today at the administration center, 799 W. Kensington Rd., Mount Prospect.

FORMATION of the unit district would cost Dist. 214 nearly 27 per cent of its students and 42 per cent of its assessed valuation, requiring a readjustment of programs and transforming the district's cash surpluses into deficits, unit district opponents have said.

When asked if the board will take any action in the courts to challenge the state law allowing only residents of the proposed unit district to vote in a unit district referendum, Gilbert said, "It's a possibility."

Gilbert said that the board is not allowed to spend taxpayers' money to oppose any referendum, including one on a unit district.

OPPONENTS of the unit district are already mobilizing their forces to get the facts out to the public before the issue comes to a vote.

"There are a lot of pieces of misinformation out and a lot of rumors and promises," said Dist. 214 board member Marilyn Quinn, who lives in Dist. 59.

"We hope the unit district can be defeated, but it will be an uphill fight," she said. "The unit district has the backing of the Elk Grove Village Assn. of Industry and Commerce, an organized group with a great deal of money to spend."

MRS. QUINN hopes to be able to enlist the support of local real estate agents in pushing to defeat the proposed unit district. The educational standards of a community affects real estate values even more than tax rates do, she said.

Unit district proponents will also be doing their share of mobilizing to get the word out to the voters. Most of the referendum planning will fall to the committee which filed the unit district petition, but the Dist. 59 Board of Education and Dist. 59 Supt. Bardwell also will have a large say in how the campaign for the proposal's passage is handled, Dist. 59 Board Pres. Judith Zanca said.

In the meantime, budget and staff planning for the 1977-78 school year has been thrown into chaos. The district will now have to work on two sets of plans: one with the two high schools and one without.

Democrats gain support as grand new party here

Split factions may OK same slate

Schaumburg Township's two Democratic groups appear ready to mend their differences long enough to support the same slate of township candidates.

The long-established Democratic Organization of Schaumburg Township named a full slate last week, and the newer Democratic "Club" has dropped plans to run a slate.

William Shifka, leader of the group, said members probably would be willing to pass literature and campaign for the older organization's candidates and expressed general approval of the slate.

"We may support their whole slate or just individuals (on it)," he said. "I do know a few of the fellows, and they seem pretty good."

JOHN F. MORRISSEY, township Democratic committeeman, said his organization has not discussed the possibility of Shifka's club involvement, but said it would welcome club support.

"We'll be happy to get anybody's help," Morrissey said.

In particular, Shifka has praised Dennis Watts and John Patrick Kelley. Watts heads the nine-member organization ticket as Democratic candidate for township supervisor, and Kelley is the slated candidate for township road commissioner.

Shifka steered clear of making a commitment on whether the club will officially endorse the older organization's slate or individual candidates.

The two groups have been competing for Democratic strength in the township since the club was formed last summer.

SINCE THEN, club members have charged the Democratic Party in the township has been nonexistent under Morrissey's "weak leadership" and have criticized Morrissey for failing to slate candidates in various elections.

Supporters of the older organization have charged the club was created to extend the late Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley's reach into the suburbs, and Morrissey repeatedly has predicted the club will be short-lived.

In addition, Morrissey refused to endorse the club's slate in the upcoming Hoffman Estates village elections.

The split extends to the leaders of the two organizations as well. Shifka ran against Morrissey for the committeeman post two years ago until irregularities in Shifka's candidacy petitions forced him from the race, and Shifka already has announced he intends to challenge Morrissey again in 1979.

Shifka explained his limited support of the organization ticket by saying, "We're still Democrats."

The club abandoned plans to name a slate for two reasons, he said.

"Their candidates look good enough, number one," he said, "and number two, it's a giant step (for the club). We'll have our hands full with the village slate in Hoffman. (If) we spread ourselves too thin, we'll get defeated for sure."

by PAT GERLACH
News analysis

After outpolling the Republicans in the last three primary elections, Schaumburg Township Democrats are coming out of the closet to bid for nine township offices held traditionally by the GOP.

Committeeman John F. Morrissey and other party leaders think the time has come for Democrats to begin making substantial inroads in Schaumburg Township government.

After the building boom of the late 1960s and early 1960s brought thousands of newcomers to Schaumburg Township, the township offices were captured by "independents," who after the election revealed their Republican colors.

"After the Republicans took over we just didn't think it was feasible for us to accomplish anything, so we didn't try, other than giving independents some support from time to time," Morrissey said.

BUT THIS is 1977. And the suburbs are not necessarily a staunch Republican bastion as evidenced in the results of the last few primaries.

And this time around the Democrats are convinced their slate stands a reasonable chance of capturing some of the township seats at stake in the April 5 election.

They may be right.

Supervisor candidate Dennis Watts showed his vote getting ability last year when 1,209 township voters came out to assure him of a three-year term on the Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 Board of Education. Watts, and another newcomer, Elizabeth Carpenter of Hanover Park, defeated two incumbents in the 1976 school board election.

WATTS SUPPORT appeared to come chiefly from teachers and Schaumburg Jaycees who felt the need for a Schaumburg village voice on the school board.

But Watts' refusal to quit the school board post if elected to the township board could cost him some votes.

While Watts can't be considered "double-dipping" because board of education members don't receive a salary, some observers have questioned the motives of a man who would serve on two governmental boards — both responsible for tax levies.

AND ROAD commissioner candidate, John Patrick Kelley appears to have more going for him in the campaign than just a handsome face, although his youth, appearance and courtly attitude are not likely to hurt either.

Kelley, 23, is a true hometown candidate having lived in the township for 19 years. And politics comes naturally to Kelley, the son of attorney John P. Kelley, a veteran Democratic leader in the area.

The younger Kelley has a political science degree and has worked on construction during college and after graduation.

He says he believes he can save the township some money by taking on some of the work now contracted. And being young and single, Kelley said he plans to possibly get a night job to supplement the $5,000 he would be paid annually by the township.

THE OTHER township candidates are not as well known as either Watts or Kelley, although Morrissey hopes to make their names household words before April 5.

What would a township victory mean for Morrissey personally?

Right now mostly satisfaction. The committeeman said the April victory would have no effect on his status "downtown."

WHILE THE POWER of a committeeman on the county central committee is directly related to his ability to deliver party votes in his territory, Morrissey said he must wait until the April 1978 primary for a change in status.

Under state law, a township or ward committeeman casts as many votes in the central committee as cast for his party at home.

Morrissey now has voting power on the committee, which represents a little less than 5,500, the total number of Democrat votes in Schaumburg Township cast in the 1976 primary.

NATURALLY, Morrissey hopes the Democratic votes increase. It would assure him of controlling more patronage jobs, although he said it would not amount to the one job per precinct he would like to control.

The committeeman said he now has about 20 jobs to dole out to faithful party workers. With nearly 73 precincts in the township, Morrissey admits his power falls far short of Chicago wards with as many as 50 jobs per precinct.

"Unfortunately I'm not alone in that problem, it is fairly uniform throughout the suburbs," Morrissey said.

County government talk

Dunne to address businessmen

Last month Schaumburg and Hoffman Estates business leaders heard Palatine Village Pres. Wendell E. Jones outline his proposal to form a new county out of six Northwest suburban townships.

On Thursday, Cook County Board Pres. George W. Dunne will discuss county government at a noon meeting of the Northwest Suburban Assn. of Commerce and Industry at the Bon Ton Restaurant, Hoffman Estates.

The business association's legislative committee is studying the Lincoln County proposal. Although the group has not yet taken a stand, Robert Brawley, association president, has said he believes the organization will support Jones' idea.

A spokesman for Dunne said the county board president is "noncommittal" on the Lincoln County proposal, saying his position will be "more fully explained" at Thursday's meeting.

"As an elected official, Mr. Dunne says he will go according to the will of the people. If they want Lincoln County then they shall have it," said Arthur Janura.

Janura said Dunne is "not an advocate either pro or con" of the proposal. "The people will have their say in a countywide referendum," Janura said.

Thursday's meeting is open to the public. Reservations, at $6 per person, can be made by contacting the association, 882-7110.

Two boys charged in apartment arson

Two Elk Grove Village youths have been charged with arson in connection with the Jan. 15 fire at Terrace Apartments, 918 Ridge Square.

Sgt. Ronald Iden of the Elk Grove Police Dept. said two boys, ages 12 and 14, were charged with starting the fire, which caused $4,500 damage to a first floor storage room and its contents.

Iden said there have been several small fires in storage rooms at the complex.

A joint police and fire department investigation found evidence in the storage room which led to the arrest, Iden said.

Iden said the boys later confessed their involvement. "It could be just a matter of playing games or it may be psychological," he said.

The boys were released to their parents.

Township political schedule meetings

Organizations for both major political parties in Elk Grove Township have scheduled meetings this week.

The Regular Republican Organization is scheduled to meet today to discuss the April township election.

The Regular Democratic Organization is scheduled to meet Tuesday.

A nine-member slate for each party will run in the April 5 election.

The Republican meeting will be held at township hall, 2400 S. Arlington Heights Rd., at 8 p.m.

The Democratic meeting will be held at Maitre D'Restaurant, 111 E. Higgins Rd., Elk Grove Village, at 8 p.m.

Four men face charges for car battery theft try

Elk Grove Village police Saturday arrested four men and charged them with the attempted theft of 10 auto batteries from the Chrysler Corp. offices at 2200 Busse Rd.

Police said they arrested Juan Rizo, 25, Juan Sanchez, 27; Ramiro L. Villarreal, 19; and Vincent M. Martinez, 27.

The four men were arrested after one of them, a Chrysler employee, allegedly loaded 10 batteries valued at $625 into a shopping cart and wheeled it to a hallway near an entrance door to the Chrysler building.

Another Chrysler employee detained the man and called police, police said. When police arrived, they said they found the man's three accomplices loading the batteries into a van. The four were arrested.

The four appeared in the Niles branch of Cook County Circuit Court for a bond hearing Saturday, and were turned over to Cook County Sheriff's Police to be held until they posted bail.

Firemen battle flames Sunday that engulf the Goldblatt's department store in Mount Prospect.

Fire guts Goldblatt's

A fire Sunday at the Mount Prospect Plaza Shopping Center destroyed a Goldblatt's department store and a bookstore.

Although official damage estimates were not available Sunday night, the loss figures are expected to be in the millions of dollars.

An adjacent ice cream parlor was heavily damaged. A jewelry store containing $100,000 in gold, diamonds and wristwatches escaped the flames but was damaged by smoke.

NO INJURIES WERE reported in the fire, which broke out at 10:50 a.m., 10 minutes before Goldblatt's was scheduled to open. Initial reports said an electrical malfunction in Goldblatt's furniture department triggered the blaze at the center, Rand and Central roads, Mount Prospect.

More than 100 firefighters from nine suburban departments battled the flames for several hours before bringing the fire under control about 2 p.m.

Within two hours, fire had razed the two-story Goldblatt's store. Firefighters directed high-pressure streams of water at all sides of the building and used snorkel units to combat the blaze from above to save the rest of the shopping center.

FIREFIGHTERS said the 16-year-old building had no sprinkler system or fire hoses because it was built before state laws requiring fire extinguishing systems were enacted.

Flames spread from Goldblatt's to the Book Corner next door, knocking down a wall and destroying the store. The 35 Flavors Ice Cream Parlor was severely damaged by heat, smoke and water.

Firefighters succeeded in keeping flames from spreading to Zoll Bros. Jewelry, adjacent to the Book Corner, and saved $100,000 in jewelry.

The fire reportedly broke out in the northwest corner of the Goldblatt's store. Flames ignited furniture, displays and clothing, and by the time firefighters arrived, the roof of the building had collapsed.

One of the first to report the fire was 12-year-old Alan Hendrickson, 200 N. Westgate Rd., Mount Prospect.

Alan said he was walking by the north side of Goldblatt's with five friends when he saw fire through a picture window.

UNCONFIRMED reports stated seven store employees and the store manager were inside Goldblatt's when the fire broke out. All escaped without injury.

Jeff Hodes, 17, of Niles, said he was behind Harry's Shoe Center in the plaza when he "heard something like an explosion" and ran to the front, where he saw 30-foot flames shooting up from the store.

"The whole back portion (of the building) was just in flames — flames and smoke," he said. Smoke was visible 20 miles away.

Mount Prospect Fire Chief Larry Pairitz called for assistance, and eight other departments responded. Ice and freezing temperatures hampered firefighting efforts, and hand torches were used to thaw water hydrant valves at the plaza.

Routine Sunday—not for Radosta

by DOUG RAY
Managing Editor

On a normal Sunday, Anthony Radosta would have been in the furniture department tagging merchandise.

This Sunday, he changed his routine. Instead of getting to work 15 minutes early, he stopped in DiCrescenzo's Italian market in the shopping center to pick up something to take home later for dinner.

So when Radosta walked around back of the Goldblatt's store and opened the door, the fire already had begun.

"I got right up to the door when two or three people ran out and said the place was on fire," Radosta looked up and saw smoke piercing through the seams in the roof.

"THE STOCK BOYS were the ones who came out the door. They yelled that my furniture store was on fire. I couldn't believe it at first because the smoke looked like steam from ice melting against the cold. Then it got heavier."

He walked around the building. In minutes flames shot through the roof. Inside a mass of yellow fire pushed toward the ceiling. Before long there was nothing left untouched by fire.

About 10 employees were inside when the furniture department went up in smoke.

Two of them, teen-age girls, stood outside the building watching the walls crumble to the ground.

"By the time I noticed it, the flames were about as tall as I am," said one of the girls. "We were in the office, and when I saw the fire we took off for the exits."

THE FIRE ALARM was sounded and the handful who still were inside made for two back doors. "Most of the people were just coming to work and hadn't gone inside yet," she said.

Radosta — who for four years worked in the area where the fire reportedly began — said there was nothing he knew of that could have started the fire. "Someone said the outlets exploded, but I really don't know if that's true," he said.

As soon as he realized what was happening, Radosta called his wife and then another Goldblatt's store at Belmont and Central, Chicago. Louis Goldblatt had been there a few minutes earlier as part of a tour of his stores.

After that, Radosta spent several hours watching the building go down.

"All I can do now is wait and see what happens. I've worked for the company for 16 years, you know. Maybe I'll get a transfer to another store."

Democrats gain support as grand new party here

by PAT GERLACH
News analysis

After outpolling the Republicans in the last three primary elections, Schaumburg Township Democrats are coming out of the closet to bid for nine township offices held traditionally by the GOP.

Committeeman John F. Morrissey and other party leaders think the time has come for Democrats to begin making substantial inroads in Schaumburg Township government.

After the building boom of the late 1960s and early 1960s brought thousands of newcomers to Schaumburg Township, the township offices were captured by "Independents," who after the election revealed their Republican colors.

"After the Republicans took over we just didn't think it was feasible for us to accomplish anything, so we didn't try, other than giving independents some support from time to time," Morrissey said.

BUT THIS is 1977. And the suburbs are not necessarily a staunch Republican bastion as evidenced in the results of the last few primaries.

And this time around the Democrats are convinced their slate stands a reasonable chance of capturing some of the township seats at stake in the April 5 election.

They may be right.

Supervisor candidate Dennis Watts showed his vote getting ability last year when 1,209 township voters came out to assure him of a three-year term on the Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 Board of Education. Watts, and another newcomer, Elizabeth Carpenter of Hanover Park, defeated two incumbents in the 1976 school board election.

WATTS SUPPORT appeared to come chiefly from teachers and Schaumburg Jaycees who felt the need for a Schaumburg village voice on the school board.

But Watts' refusal to quit the school board post if elected to the township board could cost him some votes.

While Watts can't be considered "double-dipping" because board of education members don't receive a salary, some observers have questioned the motives of a man who would serve on two governmental boards — both responsible for tax levies.

AND ROAD commissioner candidate, John Patrick Kelley appears to have more going for him in the campaign than just a handsome face, although his youth, appearance and courtly attitude are not likely to hurt either.

Kelley, 23, is a true hometown candidate having lived in the township for 19 years. And politics comes naturally to Kelley, the son of attorney John P. Kelley, a veteran Democratic leader in the area.

The younger Kelley has a political science degree and has worked on construction during college and after graduation.

He says he believes he can save the township some money by taking on some of the work now contracted. And being young and single, Kelley said he plans to possibly get a night job to supplement the $5,000 he would be paid annually by the township.

THE OTHER township candidates are not as well known as either Watts or Kelley, although Morrissey hopes to make their names household words

Split factions may OK same slate

Schaumburg Township's two Democratic groups appear ready to mend their differences long enough to support the same slate of township candidates.

The long-established Democratic Organization of Schaumburg Township named a full slate last week, and the newer Democratic "Club" has dropped plans to run a slate.

William Shifka, leader of the group, said members probably would be willing to pass literature and campaign for the older organization's candidates and expressed general approval of the slate.

"We may support their whole slate or just individuals (on it)," he said. "I do know a few of the fellows, and they seem pretty good."

JOHN F. MORRISSEY, township Democratic committeeman, said his organization has not discussed the possibility of Shifka's club involvement, but said it would welcome club support.

"We'll be happy to get anybody's help," Morrissey said.

In particular, Shifka has praised Dennis Watts and John Patrick Kelley. Watts heads the nine-member organization ticket as Democratic candidate for township supervisor, and

Week to end near 40 degrees

Bye arctic blues, heat's on way

A heat wave is converging on Chicago, with temperatures near 40 by the end of the week, the National Weather Service in Chicago has predicted.

Temperatures will rise from a high in the upper teens today, to a high in the upper 20s Tuesday and a balmy high in the upper 30s by Thursday. Lows will dip to between 10 and 15 degrees tonight, but will hover in the 20s by Thursday night.

A spokesman for the weather service said the flow of air is shifting away from the arctic northwest toward the southwest, bringing a warming trend that should last through the week. A chance of snow, however, also is forecast for Thursday.

TEMPERATURES Thursday actually may rise above the average temperature for Feb. 10, which in the past has recorded a high of 34 and a low of 19, the spokesman said.

Warmer temperatures follow a frigid blast out of the north that passed through the Chicago area during the weekend, sending temperatures plunging to 5 below at Midway Airport early Sunday morning.

The cold wave continued across the nation Sunday, threatening a frost in northern Florida, and sending the mercury plunging from New York to the Southeast. Added pressure struck dwindling heating fuel supplies.

Show added to the misery of New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Michigan residents. Nine counties in western and northern New York were assured of federal disaster aid. State officials estimated it may take nine days to restore order to the region.

tinued until after his death in May 1972, the Times said.

A REPORT FROM the New York office said that at a Women's Liberation Movement meeting in 1970 a notice was posted recommending that women use actor Paul Newman's credit card number when dialing long distance.

The report did not say whether Newman authorized use of his credit card or whether the women regarded him as a male chauvinist target.

Another meeting decided not to let Bella Abzug, then a candidate for Congress in New York, use the center's mailing list as it would enable her to "promote her politics."

Alan said he was walking by the north side of Goldblatt's with five friends when he saw fire through a picture window.

UNCONFIRMED reports stated seven store employees and the store manager were inside Goldblatt's when the fire broke out. All escaped without injury.

Jeff Hodes, 17, of Niles, said he was behind Harry's Shoe Center in the plaza when he "heard something like an explosion" and ran to the front, where he saw 30-foot flames shooting up from the store.

"The whole back portion (of the building) was just in flames — flames and smoke," he said. Smoke was visible 20 miles away.

Mount Prospect Fire Chief Larry Pairitz called for assistance, and eight other departments responded. Ice and freezing temperatures hampered firefighting efforts, and hand torches were used to thaw water hydrant valves at the plaza.

or three people ran out and said the place was on fire." Radosta looked up and saw smoke piercing through the seams in the roof.

"THE STOCK BOYS were the ones who came out the door. They yelled that my furniture store was on fire. I couldn't believe it at first because the smoke looked like steam from ice melting against the cold. Then it got heavier."

He walked around the building. In minutes flames shot through the roof. Inside a mass of yellow fire pushed toward the ceiling. Before long there was nothing left untouched by fire.

About 10 employees were inside when the furniture department went up in smoke.

Two of them, teen-age girls, stood outside the building watching the walls crumble to the ground.

"By the time I noticed it, the flames were about as tall as I am," said one of the girls. "We were in the office, and when I saw the fire we took off for the exits."

THE FIRE ALARM was sounded and the handful who still were inside made for two back doors. "Most of the people were just coming to work and hadn't gone inside yet," she said.

Radosta — who for four years worked in the area where the fire reportedly began — said there was nothing

he knew of that could have started the fire. "Someone said the outlets exploded, but I really don't know if that's true," he said.

As soon as he realized what was happening, Radosta called his wife and then another Goldblatt's store at Belmont and Central, Chicago. Louis Goldblatt had been there a few minutes earlier as part of a tour of his stores.

After that, Radosta spent several hours watching the building go down.

"All I can do now is wait and see what happens. I've worked for the company for 16 years, you know. Maybe I'll get a transfer to another store."

Dist. 59 voters to decide fate of unit plan

by SHERYL JEDLINSKI and PAM BIGFORD

State Schools Supt. Joseph Cronin has decided to allow Elk Grove Township voters to determine if a unit school district will be formed in their area, setting the stage for a referendum this spring.

Opposing a recommendation by Cook County Schools Supt. Richard Martwick, Cronin Friday told the superintendents of Dist. 59 and High School Dist. 214 that he would let the unit district issue be decided in a referendum.

According to state law, Martwick must call for the referendum to be held between March 18 and June 6. If passed by a majority vote, the unit district would become effective July 1. Only residents in Dist. 59 will be eligible to vote on the issue.

THE UNIT district would combine Dist. 59 schools, Elk Grove High School, Elk Grove Village, and Forest View High School, Arlington Heights, under on school board and administration. Dist. 59 is one of seven elementary districts now in the Dist. 214 area.

Dist. 214 Supt. Edward Gilbert said Cronin did not go into detail Friday about his decision, but that "he indicated that after studying the transcripts from the public hearings, in his opinion he did not have sufficient basis in terms of a detriment to Dist. 214 not to permit a referendum to be held."

Gilbert and Dist. 59 Supt. Roger W. Bardwell, each said they expect to receive Cronin's confirmation of the decision today in the mail.

Last month, after attending seven public hearings on the issue, Martwick recommended that Cronin reject the unit district proposal and not call for a referendum.

"I'm disappointed, I'll admit that," Gilbert said. He said the Dist. 214 board members and administrators will "brainstorm" about their next step at a board meeting at 8 p.m. today at the administration center, 799 W. Kensington Rd., Mount Prospect.

FORMATION of the unit district would cost Dist. 214 nearly 27 per cent of its students and 42 per cent of its assessed valuation, requiring a readjustment of programs and transforming the district's cash surpluses into deficits, unit district opponents have said.

When asked if the board will take any action in the courts to challenge the state law allowing only residents of the proposed unit district to vote in a unit district referendum, Gilbert said, "It's a possibility."

Gilbert said that the board is not allowed to spend taxpayers' money to oppose any referendum, including one on a unit district.

OPPOSITION of the unit district are already mobilizing their forces to get the facts out to the public before the issue comes to a vote.

"There are a lot of pieces of misinformation out and a lot of rumors and promises," said Dist. 214 board member Marilyn Quinn, who lives in Dist. 59.

"We hope the unit district can be defeated, but it will be an uphill fight," she said. "The unit district has the backing of the Elk Grove Village Assn. of Industry and Commerce, an organized group with a great deal of money to spend."

MRS. QUINN hopes to be able to enlist the support of local real estate agents in pushing to defeat the proposed unit district. The educational standards of a community affects real estate values even more than tax rates do, she said.

Unit district proponents will also be doing their share of mobilizing to get the word out to the voters. Most of the referendum planning will fall to the committee which filed the unit district petition, but the Dist. 59 Board of Education and Dist. 59 Supt. Bardwell also will have a large say in how the campaign for the proposal's passage is handled. Dist. 59 Board Pres. Judith Zanca said.

In the meantime, budget and staff planning for the 1977-78 school year has been thrown into chaos. The district will now have to work on two sets of plans: one with the two high schools and one without.

Suburban digest

Salt supplies come for two villages

Although several Northwest suburbs have shortages of salt, Mount Prospect and Wheeling are replenishing their supplies. The Mount Prospect Public Works Dept. Friday received a 100-ton shipment from a Chicago firm. David Creamer, public works director, said the supply is good for about three more saltings. Despite the fresh shipment, however, Creamer said the village's supplier said "this could be the end." In Wheeling, the village will receive a special shipment today from Racine, Wis. The village's supplier, Diamond Salt Co., has "an excess of salt," Larry Oppenheimer, village public works director, said. "We'll be getting about 44 tons — enough for one more go-round. After two more days of snow we'll probably be out of everything," he said.

Police meeting on union issue

Palatine patrolmen, blocked in their efforts to have Teamsters Local 714 represent them in contract talks with the village, will meet Tuesday to map new strategy in obtaining union recognition. Thirty-three village patrolmen — 90 per cent of the force — have joined the local, but village officials refuse to recognize the union. A union official said he will suggest at the meeting nothing that could threaten the patrolmen's jobs, such as a strike or ticket slowdown.

Week to end near 40 degrees

Bye arctic blues, heat's on way

A heat wave is converging on Chicago, with temperatures near 40 by the end of the week, the National Weather Service in Chicago has predicted.

Temperatures will rise from a high in the upper teens today, to a high in the upper 20s Tuesday and a balmy high in the upper 30s by Thursday. Lows will dip to between 10 and 15 degrees tonight, but will hover in the 20s by Thursday night.

A spokesman for the weather service said the flow of air is shifting away from the arctic northwest toward the southwest, bringing a warming trend that should last through the week. A chance of snow, however, also is forecast for Thursday.

TEMPERATURES Thursday actually may rise above the average temperature for Feb. 10, which in the past has recorded a high of 34 and a low of 19, the spokesman said.

Warmer temperatures follow a frigid blast out of the north that passed through the Chicago area during the weekend, sending temperatures plunging to 5 below at Midway Airport early Sunday morning.

The cold wave continued across the nation Sunday threatening a frost in northern Florida, and sending the mercury plunging from New York to the Southeast. Added pressure stuck dwindling heating fuel supplies.

Snow added to the misery of New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Michigan residents. Nine counties in western and northern New York were assured of federal disaster aid. State officials estimated it may take nine days to restore order to the region.

Feminist groups studied by FBI tuned until after his death in May 1972, the Times said.

A REPORT from the New York office said that at a Women's Liberation Movement meeting in 1970 a notice was posted recommending that women use actor Paul Newman's credit card number when dialing long distance.

The report did not say whether Newman authorized use of his credit card or whether the women regarded him as a male chauvinist target.

Another meeting decided not to let Bella Abzug, then a candidate for Congress in New York, use the center's mailing list as it would enable her to "promote her politics."

The Washington, Chicago and San Francisco offices of the FBI protested

to Hoover that there were not sufficient national security grounds to conduct the investigation but Hoover overruled them.

"It is absolutely essential that we conduct sufficient investigation to clearly establish subversive ramifications of the WLM and to determine the potential for violence presented by the various groups connected with this movement as well as any possible threat they may represent to the internal security of the United States," Hoover wrote.

SOME REPORTS made unflattering references to the appearance of militant women and contained suggestions the movement was dominated by lesbians.

A report from a Seattle informant said

The women in general appeared to be hippies, lesbians or from other far-out groups. Many of them were very colorfully dressed but the majority wore faded blue jeans. Most seemed to be making a real attempt to be unattractive.

The Times said the documents did not indicate what use the FBI made of the information.

Search for 2 protestors halted on Hawaiian island

HONOLULU (UPI) — The Navy has abandoned its search for two protestors on a remote Hawaiian island used for military bombing practice, but authorities said Sunday they will keep the area under surveillance.

The two men had been among a group of five who made an unauthorized landing on the restricted island a week ago.

A Navy spokesman said the search party of more than 40 marines, civilian police and naval ordinance disposal specialists was airlifted out by helicopter late Saturday from the tiny uninhabited island off the coast of Maui.

The searchers had spent a week

looking for the protestors.

Three of the protestors were removed by Pearl Harbor civilian police several days after they landed, but the two others, identified as Walter Rutte Jr. and Richard Sawyer, remained at large.

Lt. Cmdr. Scotty Stone said further searches "will be made as the situation develops." The Coast Guard will conduct surveillance of the island and surrounding restricted waters, he said.

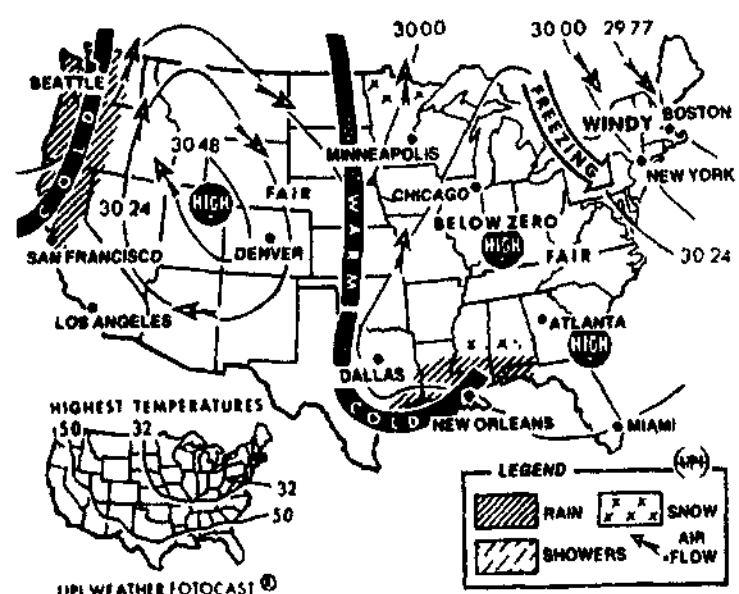

The Navy has maintained that U.S. military readiness would be diminished if training forces are halted from using Kahoolawe for bombardment and strafing practice.

Their concern has grown during the past few years because of growing demands by individuals and some top Hawaiian political leaders that the bombing be stopped and the island returned to the state for conservation purposes.

Only council interviews remain in manager pick

The long search for a permanent city manager in Rolling Meadows may be completed before the end of the month.

The field of 71 applicants who applied last fall has been narrowed to three, who have undergone psychological testing and background investigations. All that remains is an interview with the city council before the aldermen make their choice.

Joseph Kiszka, the chairman of the three-person screening committee, says he hopes "we can handle the whole thing this month."

ALD. RAYMOND NEUCKRANZ, 1st, says the interviews could be scheduled as early as Feb. 15, clearing the way for a council decision as early as Feb. 22.

But the search has been this close before. After James Watson resigned as manager in October 1975, a council committee screened 60 applicants down to a field of four last spring. But Mayor Roland J. Meyer refused to appoint a new manager until the results of a referendum on a strong-manager form of government were known.

That referendum passed last June, giving more administrative authority to the manager and making him accountable to the council rather than the mayor.

AFTER A three-month-long argument about who should screen the second batch of applications, Kiszka's committee was appointed last September.

Kiszka has not disclosed the names of the three finalists and will discuss them only in general terms. All are working in public administration, he says, and none are women because "we never received an application from a woman."

Acting City Mgr. Charles Green has acknowledged that his was one of the 71 resumes the committee received, but he won't say if he survived the screening process. Green was an administrative aide before he took over when Watson resigned, and he has said he would like to stay on even as a subordinate.

THE ORIGINAL 71 applicants came from Illinois and 23 other states, but the city's travel expense accounts indicate indirectly that most of the 10 semifinalists were Midwesterners.

Those records show only five airline tickets costing a total of $878. Two of those tickets cost $100 or less, an indication that the applicant flew to Rolling Meadows from a Midwestern state like Michigan, Indiana, Iowa or Wisconsin, according to travel agencies.

Council to discuss pay raises tonight

The Rolling Meadows City Council will meet at 7 p.m. tonight at city hall, 3600 Kirchhoff Rd., to try to resolve the problem of financing $224,000 in pay raises for 140 municipal employees.

Ald. Raymond Neuckranz, 1st, said the meeting will be "an informative type of thing" geared at ironing out misunderstandings before Tuesday night's regular council meeting.

The council has approved the pay increases but refused two weeks ago to amend the budget to provide the funds.

Neuckranz said he wants a secret meeting because individual employees and their salaries will be discussed. But Mayor Roland Meyer said he sees no reason to close it. "I think a closed session is for the convenience of some aldermen who want to be able to snout off without employees being there," he said. "Then they want to talk to the press what they think will benefit them."

A majority vote of councilmen attending is required to close the meeting.

The other three ranged from $146 to $208 — enough for a round-trip ticket to a place as far away as Phoenix, Ariz., on a night coach flight.

OF THE OTHER five applicants to visit the city and meet the manager screening committee, only two have received any reimbursement for their travel expenses — a total of $53.40 for gasoline and tolls.

Does that mean the remaining three already live in the Northwest suburbs?

"That's fishing," Kiszka says. "Maybe some of them haven't been reimbursed yet."

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The FBI investigated women's liberation groups for at least four years up to 1973 and compiled a file on the politics and sexual preferences of activist women across the nation, the Los Angeles Times reported Sunday.

The story from the Times' Washington bureau said that a 1,377-page report made public through a request under the Freedom of Information Act was censored to eliminate the names of informants and of some, but not all, of the individuals investigated.

Firemen battle flames Sunday that engulf the Goldblatt's department store in Mount Prospect.

Fire guts Goldblatt's

by DANN GIRE
and DAVE IBATA

A fire Sunday at the Mount Prospect Plaza Shopping Center destroyed a Goldblatt's department store and a bookstore.

Although official damage estimates were not available Sunday night, the loss figures are expected to be in the millions of dollars.

An adjacent ice cream parlor was heavily damaged. A jewelry store containing $100,000 in gold, diamonds and wristwatches escaped the flames but was damaged by smoke.

NO INJURIES were reported in the fire, which broke out at 10:50 a.m., 10 minutes before Goldblatt's was scheduled to open. Initial reports said an electrical malfunction in Goldblatt's furniture department triggered the blaze at the center, Rand and Central roads, Mount Prospect.

More than 100 firefighters from nine suburban departments battled the flames for several hours before bringing the fire under control about 2 p.m.

Within two hours, fire had razed the two-story Goldblatt's store. Firefighters directed high-pressure streams of water at all sides of the building and used snorkel units to combat the blaze from above to save the rest of the shopping center.

FIREFIGHTERS said the 16-year-old building had no sprinkler system or fire hoses because it was built before state laws requiring fire extinguishing systems were enacted.

Flames spread from Goldblatt's to the Book Corner next door, knocking down a wall and destroying the store. The 35 Flavors Ice Cream Parlor was severely damaged by heat, smoke and water.

Routine Sunday—not for Radosta

by DOUG RAY
Managing Editor

On a normal Sunday, Anthony Radosta would have been in the furniture department tagging merchandise.

This Sunday, he changed his routine. Instead of getting to work 15 minutes early, he stopped in DiCrescenzo's Italian market in the shopping center to pick up something to take home later for dinner.

So when Radosta walked around back of the Goldblatt's store and opened the door, the fire already had begun.

"I got right up to the door when two

firefighters succeeded in keeping flames from spreading to Zoll Bros. Jewelry, adjacent to the Book Corner, and saved $100,000 in jewelry.

The fire reportedly broke out in the northwest corner of the Goldblatt's store. Flames ignited furniture, displays and clothing, and by the time firefighters arrived, the roof of the building had collapsed.

One of the first to report the fire was 12-year-old Alan Hendrickson, 280 N. Westgate Rd., Mount Prospect.

Alan said he was walking by the north side of Goldblatt's with five friends when he saw fire through a picture window.

UNCONFIRMED reports stated seven store employees and the store manager were inside Goldblatt's when the fire broke out. All escaped without injury.

Jeff Hodes, 17, of Niles, said he was behind Harry's Shoe Center in the plaza when he "heard something like an explosion" and ran to the front, where he saw 30-foot flames shooting up from the store.

"The whole back portion (of the building) was just in flames — flames and smoke," he said. Smoke was visible 20 miles away.

Mount Prospect Fire Chief Larry Pairitz called for assistance, and eight other departments responded. Ice and freezing temperatures hampered firefighting efforts, and hand torches were used to thaw water hydrant valves at the plaza.

or three people ran out and said the place was on fire." Radosta looked up and saw smoke piercing through the seams in the roof.

"THE STOCK BOYS were the ones who came out the door. They yelled that my furniture store was on fire. I couldn't believe it at first because the smoke looked like steam from ice melting against the cold. Then it got heavier."

He walked around the building. In minutes flames shot through the roof. Inside a mass of yellow fire pushed toward the ceiling. Before long there was nothing left untouched by fire.

About 10 employees were inside when the furniture department went up in smoke.

Two of them, teen-age girls, stood outside the building watching the walls crumble to the ground.

"By the time I noticed it, the flames were about as tall as I am," said one of the girls. "We were in the office, and when I saw the fire we took off for the exits."

THE FIRE ALARM was sounded and the handful who still were inside made for two back doors. "Most of the people were just coming to work and hadn't gone inside yet," she said.

Radosta — who for four years worked in the area where the fire reportedly began — said there was nothing

he knew of that could have started the fire. "Someone said the outlets exploded, but I really don't know if that's true," he said.

As soon as he realized what was happening, Radosta called his wife and then another Goldblatt's store at Belmont and Central, Chicago. Louis Goldblatt had been there a few minutes earlier as part of a tour of his stores.

After that, Radosta spent several hours watching the building go down.

"All I can do now is wait and see what happens. I've worked for the company for 16 years, you know. Maybe I'll get a transfer to another store."

Dist. 59 voters to decide fate of unit plan

by SHERYL JEDLINSKI
and PAM BIGFORD

State Schools Supt. Joseph Cronin has decided to allow Elk Grove Township voters to determine if a unit school district will be formed in their area, setting the stage for a referendum this spring.

Opposing a recommendation by Cook County Schools Supt. Richard Martwick, Cronin Friday told the superintendents of Dist. 59 and High School Dist. 214 that he would let the unit district issue be decided in a referendum.

According to state law, Martwick must call for the referendum to be held between March 18 and June 6. If passed by a majority vote, the unit district would become effective July 1. Only residents in Dist. 59 will be eligible to vote on the issue.

THE UNIT district would combine Dist. 59 schools, Elk Grove High School, Elk Grove Village, and Forest View High School, Arlington Heights, under on school board and administration. Dist. 59 is one of seven elementary districts now in the Dist. 214 area.

Dist. 214 Supt. Edward Gilbert said Cronin did not go into detail Friday about his decision, but that "he indicated that after studying the transcripts from the public hearings, in his opinion he did not have sufficient basis in terms of a detriment to Dist. 214 not to permit a referendum to be held."

Gilbert and Dist. 59 Supt. Roger W. Bardwell, each said they expect to receive Cronin's confirmation of the decision today in the mail.

Last month, after attending seven public hearings on the issue, Martwick recommended that Cronin reject the unit district proposal and not call for a referendum.

"I'm disappointed, I'll admit that," Gilbert said. He said the Dist. 214 board members and administrators will "brainstorm" about their next step at a board meeting at 8 p.m. today at the administration center, 799 W. Kensington Rd., Mount Prospect.

FORMATION of the unit district would cost Dist. 214 nearly 27 per cent of its students and 42 per cent of its assessed valuation, requiring a readjustment of programs and transforming the district's cash surpluses into deficits, unit district opponents have said.

When asked if the board will take any action in the courts to challenge the state law allowing only residents of the proposed unit district to vote in a unit district referendum, Gilbert said, "It's a possibility."

Gilbert said that the board is not allowed to spend taxpayers' money to oppose any referendum, including one on a unit district.

OPPOSITION of the unit district are already mobilizing their forces to get the facts out to the public before the issue comes to a vote.

"There are a lot of pieces of misinformation out and a lot of rumors and promises," said Dist. 214 board member Marilyn Quinn, who lives in Dist. 59.

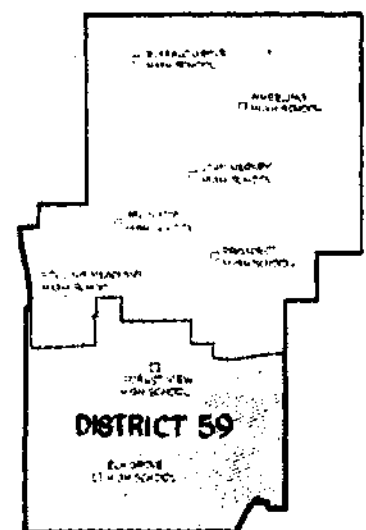

"We hope the unit district can be defeated, but it will be an uphill fight," she said. "The unit district has the backing of the Elk Grove Village Assn. of Industry and Commerce, an organized group with a great deal of money to spend."

MRS. QUINN hopes to be able to enlist the support of local real estate agents in pushing to defeat the proposed unit district. The educational standards of a community affects real estate values even more than tax rates do, she said.

Unit district proponents will also be doing their share of mobilizing to get the word out to the voters. Most of the referendum planning will fall to the committee which filed the unit district petition, but the Dist. 59 Board of Education and Dist. 59 Supt. Bardwell also will have a large say in how the campaign for the proposal's passage is handled, Dist. 59 Board Pres. Judith Zanca said.

In the meantime, budget and staff planning for the 1977-78 school year has been thrown into chaos. The district will now have to work on two sets of plans: one with the two high schools and one without.

Salt supplies come for two villages

Although several Northwest suburbs have shortages of salt, Mount Prospect and Wheeling are replenishing their supplies. The Mount Prospect Public Works Dept. Friday received a 100-ton shipment from a Chicago firm. David Creamer, public works director, said the supply is good for about three more saltings. Despite the fresh shipment, however, Creamer said the village's supplier said "this could be the end." In Wheeling, the village will receive a special shipment today from Racine, Wis. The village's supplier, Diamond Salt Co., has "an excess of salt," Larry Oppenheimer, village public works director, said. "We'll be getting about 44 tons — enough for one more go-round. After two more days of snow we'll probably be out of everything," he said.

Police meeting on union issue

Palatine patrolmen, blocked in their efforts to have Teamsters Local 714 represent them in contract talks with the village, will meet Tuesday to map new strategy in obtaining union recognition. Thirty-three village patrolmen — 90 per cent of the force — have joined the local, but village officials refuse to recognize the union. A union official said he will suggest at the meeting nothing that could threaten the patrolmen's jobs, such as a strike or ticket slowdown.

Week to end near 40 degrees

Bye arctic blues, heat's on way

A heat wave is converging on Chicago, with temperatures near 40 by the end of the week, the National Weather Service in Chicago has predicted.

Temperatures will rise from a high in the upper teens today, to a high in the upper 20s Tuesday and a balmy high in the upper 30s by Thursday. Lows will dip to between 10 and 15 degrees tonight, but will hover in the 20s by Thursday night.

A spokesman for the weather service said the flow of air is shifting away from the arctic northwest toward the southwest, bringing a warming trend that should last through the week. A chance of snow, however, also is forecast for Thursday.

TEMPERATURES Thursday actually may rise above the average temperature for Feb. 10, which in the past has recorded a high of 34 and a low of 19, the spokesman said.

Warmer temperatures follow a frigid blast out of the north that passed through the Chicago area during the weekend, sending temperatures plunging to 5 below at Midway Airport early Sunday morning.

The cold wave continued across the nation Sunday, threatening a frost in northern Florida, and sending the mercury plunging from New York to the Southeast. Added pressure struck dwindling heating fuel supplies.

Snow added to the misery of New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Michigan residents. Nine counties in western and northern New York were assured of federal disaster aid. State officials estimated it may take nine days to restore order to the region.

lined until after his death in May 1972, the Times said.

A REPORT FROM the New York office said that at a Women's Liberation Movement meeting in 1970 a notice was posted recommending that women use actor Paul Newman's credit card number when dialing long distance.

The report did not say whether Newman authorized use of his credit card or whether the women regarded him as a male chauvinist target.

Another meeting decided not to let Bella Abzug, then a candidate for Congress in New York, use the center's mailing list as it would enable her to "promote her politics."

The Washington, Chicago and San Francisco offices of the FBI protested

to Hoover that there were not sufficient national security grounds to conduct the investigation but Hoover overruled them.

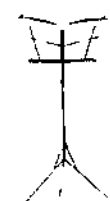

"It is absolutely essential that we conduct sufficient investigation to clearly establish subversive ramifications of the WLM and to determine the potential for violence presented by the various groups connected with this movement as well as any possible threat they may represent to the internal security of the United States," Hoover wrote.

SOME REPORTS made unflattering references to the appearance of militant women and contained suggestions the movement was dominated by lesbians.

A report from a Seattle informant said:

"The women, in general, appeared to be hippies, lesbians or from other far-out groups. Many of them were very colorfully dressed but the majority wore faded blue jeans. Most seemed to be making a real attempt to be unattractive."

The Times said the documents did not indicate what use the FBI made of the information.

Search for 2 protestors halted on Hawaiian island

HONOLULU (UPI) — The Navy has abandoned its search for two protestors on a remote Hawaiian island used for military bombing practice, but authorities said Sunday they will keep the area under surveillance.

The two men had been among a group of five who made an unauthorized landing on the restricted island a week ago.

A Navy spokesman said the search party of more than 40 marines, civilian police and naval ordnance disposal specialists was airlifted out by helicopter late Saturday from the tiny, uninhabited island off the coast of Maui.

The searchers had spent a week

looking for the protestors.

Three of the protestors were removed by Pearl Harbor civilian police several days after they landed, but the two others, identified as Walter Rite Jr. and Richard Sawyer, remained at large.

Lt. Cmdr. Scotty Stone said further searches "will be made as the situation develops." The Coast Guard will conduct surveillance of the island and surrounding restricted waters, he said.

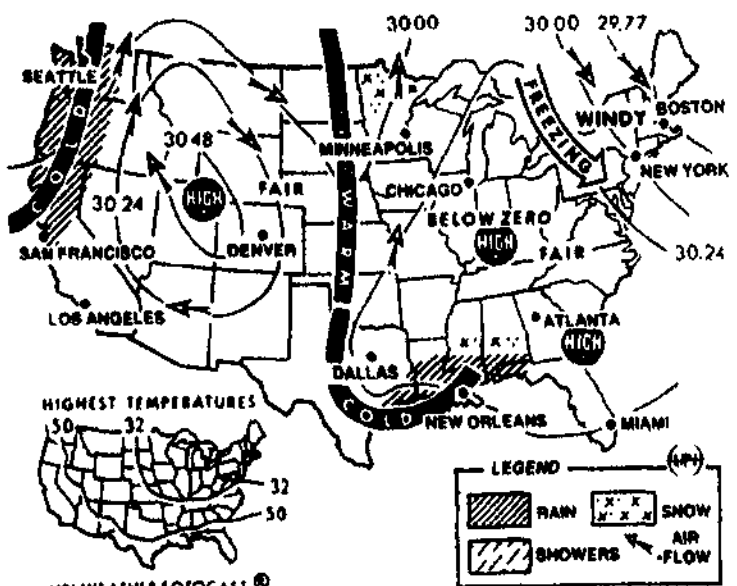

The Navy has maintained that U.S. military readiness would be diminished if training forces are halted from using Kahoolawe for bombardment and strafing practice.

Their concern has grown during the past few years because of growing demands by individuals and some top Hawaiian political leaders that the bombing be stopped and the island returned to the state for conservation purposes.

Police to meet with union on village's bid rejection

Palatine patrolmen will meet Tuesday with representatives of Teamsters Local 714 to determine their response to the village's refusal to recognize the union.

William Hogan, president of Berwyn Local 714, said a meeting is planned from 1 to 4 p.m. at Uncle Andy's Cow Palace, Northwest Highway and Quentin Road. Hogan said he hopes to meet with two shifts of patrolmen during the three hours. Shifts change at 3 p.m.

The local president said he hopes a majority of the 33 patrolmen who have joined the union will attend the session. "I'm sure we'll have a lengthy discussion," he said.

THE MEETING will be closed to the public but Hogan said officials probably will have a statement ready following the session.

The meeting has been called to give patrolmen an opportunity to discuss with union officials what action they wish to take in view of the village board's rejection of the union's bid for formal bargaining recognition.

Hogan said he will suggest nothing that could threaten the patrolmen's jobs, such as a strike or a ticket slowdown, adding that union officials want to hear from the patrolmen before any counter proposal is made to the village. THE VILLAGE board voted last month to reject the Teamsters request for recognition to bargain on behalf of the village patrolmen. The board instead proposed a formal negotiating procedure for all village employees. The procedure would establish three-member employee teams from each of five village departments to bargain with village officials on behalf of employees from their respective departments.

The board has not yet begun discussions of the proposed bargaining procedure.

Officials expect pothole hotline action in spring

Palatine's pothole hotline has been a quiet number lately, but village officials expect the spring thaw to put a quick end to the phone silence.

Robert Miller, public works director, said potholes usually develop as snow melts and salt begins to eat away at pavements. Although the village recently has received several calls about potholes, Miller said most of the calls will begin when the snow starts to melt.

He said he doesn't expect a serious pothole problem in the village this year because of the major resurfacing work done on many village streets last summer.

UNDER A PROGRAM of permanent patching, entire street surfaces were paved rather than patched. Miller said the work will alleviate much of the village's normal pothole problem because permanent material will not erode as easily as patching material.

Miller said the repaving of Northwest Highway also has eased the village's calls about potholes because many of the calls were about situations on this major thoroughfare.

Areas of major pothole problems, such as along Palatine Road west of Northwest Highway, probably will be patched without residents having to call and inform the village of a problem, he said.

Residents who wish to report the location of a pothole should call 358-7500, ext. 270.

Public works crews unsung heroes of cold

Fame and glory are not the lot of a public works employee, but during winter's foulest days no one is a more worthy candidate for a little praise and recognition.

Ask Robert Miller, Palatine public works director, and he'll tell you the public works crews are the village's unsung heroes. And even if you allow that as their boss, Miller is somewhat prejudiced in his assessment, the facts show his kudos are justifiable.

During the past 39 days of record-setting below freezing temperatures, the 20 public works employees have worked hundreds of hours of overtime operating snow plows, repairing broken water mains, making sure village police cars start and fixing those that don't.

AND ALL THIS work, for the most part, has been done in wind-chill factors well below zero.

Miller said there has been little or no absenteeism throughout the recent weather crisis.

"We have no strict work rules but these guys are dedicated to their jobs," Miller said. "They believe their job is critical enough that they can't refuse to come out when they are called and they understand that they will be called and some times that they'll have to work in these conditions."

"They don't get to work in nice, warm offices," Miller said of the employees. "They have to be out there when the temperatures are 5 below with wind-chills of 50 below."

Miller said predictions for continued cold weather in February will not make the job any easier for the public works department. "But we just keep working whether anyone takes the time to notice it or not."

Firemen battle flames Sunday that engulf the Goldblatt's department store in Mount Prospect.

Fire guts Goldblatt's

by DANN GIRE

A fire Sunday at the Mount Prospect Plaza Shopping Center destroyed a Goldblatt's department store and a bookstore.

Although official damage estimates were not available Sunday night, the loss figures are expected to be in the millions of dollars.

An adjacent ice cream parlor was heavily damaged. A jewelry store containing $100,000 in gold, diamonds and wristwatches escaped the flames but was damaged by smoke.

NO INJURIES were reported in the fire, which broke out at 10:50 a.m. 10 minutes before Goldblatt's was scheduled to open. Initial reports said an electrical malfunction in Goldblatt's furniture department triggered the blaze at the center, Rand and Central roads, Mount Prospect.

More than 100 firefighters from nine suburban departments battled the flames for several hours before bringing the fire under control about 2 p.m.

Within two hours fire had razed the two-story Goldblatt's store. Firefighters directed high pressure streams of water at all sides of the building and used smokeless units to combat the blaze from above to save the rest of the shopping center.

FIREFIGHTERS said the 16-year-old building had no sprinkler system or fire hoses because it was built before state laws requiring fire extinguishing systems were enacted.

Flames spread from Goldblatt's to the Book Corner next door, knocking down a wall and destroying the store. The 38 Flavours Ice Cream Parlor was severely damaged by heat, smoke and water.

Routine Sunday—not for Radosta

by DOUG RAY
Managing Editor

On a normal Sunday Anthony Radosta would have been in the furniture department tagging merchandise.

This Sunday he changed his routine. Instead of getting to work 15 minutes early he stopped in DiCrescenzo's Italian market in the shopping center to pick up something to take home later for dinner.

So when Radosta walked around back of the Goldblatt's store and opened the door, the fire already had begun.

"I got right up to the door when two

firefighters succeeded in keeping flames from spreading to Zoll Bros. Jewelry, adjacent to the Book Corner, and saved $100,000 in jewelry.

The fire reportedly broke out in the northwest corner of the Goldblatt's store. Flames ignited furniture, displays and clothing and by the time firefighters arrived, the roof of the building had collapsed.

One of the first to report the fire was 12-year-old Alan Hendrickson, 299 N. Westgate Rd., Mount Prospect.

or three people ran out and said the place was on fire. Radosta looked up and saw smoke pouring through the seams in the roof.

"THE STOCK BOYS" were the ones who came out the door. They yelled that my furniture store was on fire. I couldn't believe it at first because the smoke looked like steam from ice melting against the cold. Then it got heavier.

He walked around the building. In minutes flames shot through the roof. Inside a mass of yellow fire pushed toward the ceiling. Before long there was nothing left untouched by fire.

About 10 employees were inside when

Alan said he was walking by the north side of Goldblatt's with five friends when he saw fire through a picture window.

UNCONFIRMED reports stated seven store employees and the store manager were inside Goldblatt's when the fire broke out. All escaped without injury.

Jeff Hodes, 17, of Niles, said he was behind Harry's Shoe Center in the plaza when he heard something like an explosion and ran to the front, where he saw 30-foot flames shooting up from the store.

"The whole back portion (of the building) was just in flames — flames and smoke," he said. Smoke was visible 20 miles away.

Mount Prospect Fire Chief Larry Pautz called for assistance, and eight other departments responded. Ice and freezing temperatures hampered firefighting efforts and hand torches were used to thaw water hydrant valves at the plaza.

After that Radosta spent several hours watching the building go down.

All I can do now is wait and see what happens. I've worked for the company for 16 years, you know. Maybe I'll get a transfer to another store.

Dist. 59 voters to decide fate of unit plan

by SHERYL JEDLINSKI
and PAM BIGFORD

State Schools Supt. Joseph Cronin has decided to allow Elk Grove Township voters to determine if a unit school district will be formed in their area, setting the stage for a referendum this spring.

Opposing a recommendation by Cook County Schools Supt. Richard Martwick, Cronin Friday told the superintendents of Dist. 59 and High School Dist. 214 that he would let the unit district issue be decided in a referendum.

According to state law, Martwick must call for the referendum to be held between March 18 and June 6. If passed by a majority vote, the unit district would become effective July 1. Only residents in Dist. 59 will be eligible to vote on the issue.

THE UNIT district would combine Dist. 59 schools, Elk Grove High School, Elk Grove Village and Forest View High School, Arlington Heights, under one school board and administration. Dist. 59 is one of seven elementary districts now in the Dist. 214 area.

Dist. 214 Supt. Edward Gilbert said Cronin did not go into detail Friday about his decision, but that "he indicated that after studying the transcripts from the public hearings in his opinion he did not have sufficient basis in terms of a detriment to Dist. 214 not to permit a referendum to be held."

Gilbert and Dist. 59 Supt. Roger W. Bardwell, each said they expect to receive Cronin's confirmation of the decision today in the mail.

Last month, after attending seven public hearings on the issue, Martwick recommended that Cronin reject the unit district proposal and not call for a referendum.

"I'm disappointed I'll admit that," Gilbert said. He said the Dist. 214 board members and administrators will "brainstorm" about their next step at a board meeting at 8 p.m. today at the administration center, 799 W. Kensington Rd., Mount Prospect.

FORMATION of the unit district would cost Dist. 214 nearly 27 per cent of its students and 42 per cent of its assessed valuation, requiring a readjustment of programs and transforming the district's cash surpluses into deficits, unit district opponents have said.

When asked if the board will take any action in the courts to challenge the state law allowing only residents of the proposed unit district to vote in a unit district referendum, Gilbert said, "It's a possibility."

Gilbert said that the board is not allowed to spend taxpayers' money to oppose any referendum including one on a unit district.

OPPOSITION of the unit district are already mobilizing their forces to get the facts out to the public before the issue comes to a vote.

"There are a lot of pieces of misinformation out and a lot of rumors and promises," said Dist. 214 board member Marilyn Quinn, who lives in Dist. 59.

"We hope the unit district can be defeated but it will be an uphill fight," she said. "The unit district has the backing of the Elk Grove Village Assn. of Industry and Commerce, an organized group with a great deal of money to spend."

MRS. QUINN hopes to be able to enlist the support of local real estate agents in pushing to defeat the proposed unit district. The educational standards of a community affects real estate values even more than tax rates, she said.

Unit district proponents will also be doing their share of mobilizing to get the word out to the voters. Most of the referendum planning will fall to the committee which filed the unit district petition but the Dist. 59 Board of Education and Dist. 59 Supt. Bardwell also will have a large say in how the campaign for the proposal's passage is handled. Dist. 59 Board Pres Judith Zanca said.

In the meantime, budget and staff planning for the 1977-78 school year has been thrown into chaos. The district will now have to work on two sets of plans — one with the two high schools and one without.

Nostalgia saves energy

Trinity United Methodist Church, 605 E. Golf Rd., took advantage of the extreme cold weather last week and provided nostalgia for parishioners while, heeding the plea to save fuel.

The congregation gathered for Sunday morning worship services in its small old church building and kept the new large sanctuary at very low temperature. Worshipers were crowded but for long-time members it was a time for remembering the church's early years when services were held regularly in the small area. For newer members, it provided a glimpse into the church's history.

"There are no plans for doing this on a regular basis," the Rev. Russell Koenig reported. "It was mostly symbolic. However, if the temperature does get down to 20 below zero again, we'll probably repeat the procedure."

BOY SCOUT TROOP 23 has a paper drive scheduled for Saturday with contributions to be delivered that day to Fairview School, 300 N. Fairview Ave. Call 253-8432 or 253-3903 for papers to be picked up. Proceeds will be used for summer camp and awards.

The Troop also is selling Kathryn Belch party candies and the above mentioned telephone numbers can be called for purchases.

CUB SCOUT PACK 151, also from Fairview School, will hold Genius Night this year March 17, with the theme "Things That Go." Participating boys will display devices they invent. Parents and brothers and sisters are allowed to assist the boys with the projects.

OLD TIMERS will be sorry to learn that Mount Prospect pioneer Fred A. Tice died last month at age 85 in California. Fred served in many important positions for the community and his church, South Church-Community Baptist, for many years before leaving the community in 1965. He and his wife, Opal, and children, Nancy Jo, Blair and Cynthia, formerly resided at 317 S. Main St.

Memorial gifts may be contributed, through South Church, to the Educational Fund at the College of Wooster, Wooster, Ohio, 44691.

ALERT Affiliated League of Emergency Radio Teams, is seeking new members for the local group based in Mount Prospect. ALERT assists stranded motorists and helps with crowd control during large social events and emergencies. The Cook County group of 41 has been in existence for three years.

Most ALERT members live within a 10-mile radius of Mount Prospect. They provide their own cars and use CB radios extensively. Most have had first aid training and they carry blankets, flares, emergency lights, first aid equipment and fire extinguishers.

WHEELING POLICE radio operator Dieter Lenz was the first civilian hired by the department to be a dispatcher. The 27-year-old Dieter was disabled in Vietnam. He has been on the job three years. Police officials say they would like to hire more veterans.

As police dispatcher

Disabled vet proves himself at job

by LINDA PUNCH

Dieter Lenz knows the frustration of being an unemployed disabled veteran.

Before joining the Wheeling Police Dept. as a radio dispatcher three years ago, Lenz spent several years in search of a permanent job. The 27-year-old former Marine, who lost both legs during a mine explosion in Vietnam, recalls the repeated disappointments.

"I spent close to two years looking for my first job. It was always 'we'll call you.' It got depressing," he said.

LENZ, A WAUKEGAN resident, heard about the job with the Wheeling police through a friend on the Lake Forest Police Dept. His earlier jobs with an electrical supply company and an oil additive company had fallen through, and he was tiring from the work as a mail sorter with the U.S. Postal Service.

"There's really not that much walking required with this job. I have no problems with it," he said.

As radio dispatcher, Lenz must monitor all emergency radios, answer phone calls, listen to public complaints and still remain in touch with patrolling squad cars.

"On some days it gets a little frustrating. You have the phone on one ear and you're trying to pick out some guy's voice on the radio with the other. You just have to get used to things like that," he said.

For the policeman on patrol, Lenz is often the only contact in case of unexpected trouble. Lenz said he has learned to know each man's voice and "how they react in certain situations."

"As you go along, you learn how each man operates. Whenever there's a family disturbance or suspicious circumstances on a midnight shift, I always send a backup car," he said.

DESPITE RADIO contact, however, the men in the squad cars are "really on their own," Lenz said.

"If they come on something they have to wait for the closest car if there's any kind of trouble," he said.

Lenz also copes with legal questions from citizens, phone complaints and "people" who call at 4 a.m. just to talk.

"We have one woman who calls in to tell us her problems. It's the hardest thing. It gets on your nerves with so many other things going on, but you just have to take it all in stride," he said.

WHEELING POLICE Chief M.O. Horcher said Lenz's success as a radio dispatcher has opened the way for other disabled veterans. He said the department will be hiring additional civilian dispatchers and that he would like a handicapped person to be among the group.

Cook County is subsidizing a program run by the Mount Prospect Fire Dept. which trains disabled war veterans, like Lenz, to be radio dispatchers. Upon completing the 20-week training course, the men will be placed in dispatching jobs throughout the Northwest suburbs at hospitals, police and fire departments and other communication centers where help is needed.

"Dieter is an example of how a person can accomplish things on his own," Horcher said. "He came in and did a job quite well. It's more than operating radio equipment. You have to have a real good personality to deal with people."

Salt shortage poses no problem

A salt shortage that is crippling several Northwest suburbs in the wake of heavy freezing snowfalls has not seriously affected Mount Prospect.

The village Friday received a 100-ton shipment of salt from the International Salt Co., Chicago, which is more than most communities in the area are getting.

Public Works Director David L. Creamer said Mount Prospect's supply is good for about three more saltings. But despite the fresh shipment, Creamer said International notified the village "this could be the end."

Shipments have been stalled this month because barges delivering the salt are stranded on frozen Midwest rivers. Most municipalities do not expect more salt until the waterways begin to thaw.

Creamer said village public works crews still are salting every major intersection in Mount Prospect after heavy snowfall. "But we've cut back the amount and are using it very sparingly," he added.

Motorists can do their share to help

Mount Prospect students involved in collegiate activities include Steve Bolger, a freshman at Goshen College, is a member of the school's jazz band. Kathleen Freko and Karen Missar, both freshmen at the University of Iowa, have joined the Sigma chapter of Alpha Xi Delta sorority on campus.

Robin Fink has been named to Alpha Lambda Delta, national honor society for freshmen at the University of Illinois. William Epperly, junior, and Mark Beilke, senior, are serving as officers of the Zeta Beta chapter of Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia, national professional music fraternity, at Augustana College-Rock Island. William Dean Cahill has been awarded a University of Iowa foundation honors scholarship for the second semester of the academic year. Judith L. Simpson has been named to Phi Kappa Phi honor society at the University of Illinois-Champaign. Mary McCourt, a senior at the College of Saint Teresa, has been named to "Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges."
